Eight Accused In Plot To Steal Drug Secrets

NEW YORK (AP)—An Italian viscount and seven other men were accused by the federal government Monday of stealing the secrets of American wonder drugs and peddling them in Rome and Milan.

Arrested as the purported ringleader of the plot was Sidney M. Fox, 41, a former research chemist of Lederle Laboratories of Pearl River, N.Y. The pharmaceutical firm was said to have invested more than $10 million in the past six years to develop the wonder drugs.

Fox was held in $50,000 bail, with no date set for trial.

Two other former Lederle employes were named in a federal grand jury indictment, handed up last Friday but made public Monday. They were John Cancelarich, 31, of Dumont, N.J.; a chemical engineer; and Joseph Gerace, 34, of Garnerville, N.Y., a laboratory assistant.

The Italian nobleman named in the indictment was Visconti Nicolo di Madrone, 43, of Milan, described as owner of a large parmaceutical company there and a member of one of Italy's most distinguished families.

The defendants were accused of stealing cultures of the drugs with a potential value of millions for sale to Italian sources.

Others named in the indictment were Dr. Caesar Bottone, 35, of Englewood, N.J., and his partner in Fort Lee, N.J., Laboratory Enterprise, Panmed, Inc., Elio Salvetti, 32, of Milan.

Also Leonard H. Fine, 40, an independent laboratory chemist of Waldwick, N.J.; and Nathan Sharff, of Teaneck, N.J.

The wonder drugs involved were aureomycin, achromycin, declomycin and aristocort—antibiotics used in treatment of a variety of ailments.

The five-count federal indictment against the eight men provides a maximum penalty upon conviction of 35 years in prison and fines totalling $35,000 for each defendant.

Bottone and Sharff were arrested in Newark and held there for removal hearings.

Fox went to work for Lederle in 1954. The government charged he stole cultures, trade secrets and research data before he left the laboratory in 1959.

U.S. Atty. Vinct L. Broderick claimed Fox set up his own laboratory in Suffern, N.Y., and that when some of his Lederle cultures went stale, he induced Cancelarich and Gerace to steal fresh ones.

Salvetti and Bottone were described as go-betweens in a deal whereby the wonder drug data were relayed to Sharff and Viscount Di Modrone and various Italian drug manufacturers for manufacture of the drugs in Italy.

The result, according to a statement by Lederle Laboratories, was that Italian firms were able to produce the drugs without big investments of their own to develop them.

10-Month-Old Boy Dies As Home Burns

CAMBRIDGE (AP) — A 10-month-old-boy died Monday in a fire which destroyed a one-story frame home in northern Dorchester County.

Police said the victim, Stevie Gibbs, was one of four children left alone in the house while their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Kaiser Stewart, were at work. The other three children, none older than 5, escaped the flames.

Authorities said the fire apparently was caused by an overheated wood-burning stove.

U.S. Promise Of Arms Aid Given Nehru

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Bolstered by the promise of U.S. military aid, India scorned Peiping peace overtures and rushed reinforcements to the front Monday to face Chinese Communist troops driving deeper southward behind superior firepower.

A government spokesman put Indian losses at 2,000 to 2,500 dead or missing in 10 days but claimed the Communists were suffering much heavier casualties in attacking in waves.

Reds Seize Demchok

Chinese capture of Demchok, close to the undefined Kashmir border, was conceded in the deepest thrust the Communists have made across the frontier in the northwest since they launched their big offensive Oct. 20.

The Indians gave up Demchok, a 14,000-foot high outpost, after bitter fighting against superior forces, the spokesman said. Demchok is about 300 miles southeast of Srinigar, the capital of Kashmir.

Informed sources in Assam claimed a victory by the Indians in recapturing Jang, four miles east of the strategic Buddhist center of Towang on the northeast front. The informants said this put the Indians in a stronger position for retaking the monastery town, which fell to the invaders Oct. 25.

British Weapons Arrive

Prime Minister Nehru turned to the United States for modern weapons and got a quick response from U.S. Ambassador John Kenneth Galbraith that they could be sent—probably by the end of the week.

The appeal to the United States came as two planeloads of British arms and ammunition arrived, with more expected. But Nehru was clearly pinning his hopes on Washington for his skimpily equipped forces' needs to stem the Communist tide.

Informants said the first American supplies might be rushed from Thailand, where the United Sates was building up a stock of arms when the Communist threat in Laos threatened to spill over into that pro-Western ally.

Norstad Delays Leaving NATO

PARIS (UPI)—The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) announced Monday that U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad would stay on as supreme Allied commander in Europe until Jan. 1. NATO sources said he delayed his retirement by two months because of the critical world situation.

Norstad, supreme Allied commander in Europe for the last six years, had been scheduled to turn over his job to U. S. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer on Wednesday.

But a communique issued from the NATO Permanent Council headquarters here said:

"The North Atlantic Council has decided to delay until Jan. 1, 1963, the replacement of Gen. Norstad, supreme commander of Allied forces in Europe, by Gen. Lemnitzer."

Venezuela Says Saboteurs Aim At New Targets

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The Interior Ministry said Monday night the dynamiting of vital oil installations was part of a sabotage campaign ordered from Havana that also was aimed at communications.

A time bomb was found 20 minutes before it would have blown up radio and television installations carrying President Romulo Betancourt's mobilization message to the nation Saturday night, said Interior Minister Carlos Andres Perez. He gave no further details.

Perez told reporters the Venezuelan government, as well as that of the United States, had intercepted orders from Prime Minister Fidel Castro's Cuba for a sabotage campaign against Venezuela's rich oil fields. The ministry estimates there are 40,000 Communists in Venezuela, a prime target of Castro propaganda.

The government turned the oil fields at Maracaibo, 300 miles west of Caracas, into a military zone in the wake of the sabotage there early Sunday. National guardsmen patrolled the area, and a marine battalion also was sent in, the Interior Ministry said.

Military patrols also were assigned to iron production centers as another probable target of Communist sabotage, the ministry reported.

There were reports that a time bomb was found in shipping installations of Shell Oil Co. at Lake Maracaibo, but a spokesman of the British and Dutch-owned firm would neither confirm nor deny this.

A task force of technicians labored to repair damage caused by bomb blasts Sunday that knocked out four power stations and about one-sixth of Venezuela's oil production.

The Interior Ministry said two captured saboteurs were Venezuelan Communists who apparently acted on orders sent from Havana only a few hours before. Police said one of the blasts apparently killed one saboteur in a boat.

Ecuador Confiscates Red Propaganda

QUITO, Ecuador (AP)—Police in the port city of Guayaquil have seized three tons of Communist propaganda books and pamphlets, the government announced Monday. Thant's Crisis Talks Go Smoothly

U.N. Secretary Departs Today To Meet Castro

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —U Thant conferred Monday night with Premier Khrushchev's special envoy amid indications that the Acting Secretary-General's negotiations on the Cuban crisis were going smoothly.

Thant met for a second time with Vasily V. Kuznetsov, first deputy Soviet foreign minister, on the eve of Thant's departure Tuesday morning for Cuba and talks with Prime Minister Fidel Castro on steps to get Soviet missiles out of Cuba.

Thant met also during the day with U.S. and Cuban representatives.

The U.N. released a letter Thant sent to Khrushchev Sunday in which he expressed belief the situation in the Caribbean area would be normalized when the missiles are removed and the bases dismantled under U.N. supervision as agreed to by Khrushchev.

Brazilian Airliner Chartered

Thant is going to Havana in a U.N.-chartered Brazilian airliner with a team of 29 U.N. officials and military experts. He plans to stay two or three days.

His task was admittedly a delicate one—to win Castro's approval for formulas Thant worked out here in conjunction with U.S. and Soviet officials.

Thant's first meeting Monday morning with Kuznetsov lasted two hours.

A U.N. spokesman who was present said it was a good meeting, and that the Soviet delegate came up with "constructive suggestions about practical steps for the implementation of agreements already reached with the aim of settling the crisis over Cuba."

Thant met also with Cuban Ambassador Mario Garcia-Inchaustegui, who told Thant his visit to Havana is most welcome. He said Raul Primelles, Cuba's deputy permanent U.N. representative, would accompany Thant on the Havana flight.

Thant, Stevenson Confer

Thant also met Monday with U.S. Chief Delegate Adlai E. Stevenson and John J. McCloy, a veteran U.S. troubleshooter who is chairman of President Kennedy's newly appointed three-man coordinating committee on the Cuban crisis.

The other two members are Undersecretary of State George W. Ball and Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric.

McCloy has been special adviser to Stevenson during the Cuban crisis. Ball and Gilpatric rushed from Washington to confer with McCloy and Stevenson prior to their appointment with Thant.

The three-man committee will report directly to President Kennedy, but operate under the supervision of Stevenson, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

Humphrey Hails Break In Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic whip Hubert H. Humphrey said after seeing Prsident Kennedy Monday night that the break in the Cuban crisis was "a great victory for peace and America."

But Sen. Barry Goldwater, the Republican campaign chairman, said President Kennedy will be handing Russia "an important victory" if he firmly pledges not to invade Cuba."

Humphrey, interviewed after he discussed the Cuban situation with Kennedy, said: "Of course I feel relieved ... I feel the President has handled the situation in a wise, prudent and statesmanlike way."

British Nudists Seek More Beach Space

LONDON (AP) — Britain's two biggest nudist groups have united in a campaign to get on to more public beaches.

The other organization is the Federation of British Sun Clubs.

U.S. Balance Of Payments Deficit Rises

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. balance of payments deficit took a sharp turn for the worse in the July-September quarter. However, officials emphasized they see no reason yet to predict a longer-term setback.

The Federal Reserve Board, in its October bulletin, reported that the payments deficit in the first nine months of the year was running at an annual rate of $1.8 billion, on the basis of preliminary estimates.

This meant the annual rate in the third quarter was $2.6 billion compared with $872 million in the preceding three months. The 1961 deficit was $2.5 billion.

The payments deficit represents the difference between the amount of money Americans spend, lend, invest and give away abroad and the lesser amount received from foreign sources. Deficits give foreign government and central banks surplus dollars that they may use to buy American gold.

Officials noted that the July-September step-up in the deficit largely reflected a change in Canada's monetary situation.

In the first half of the year, Canada lost about $900 million of reserves, mostly to the United States. This helped reduce the U.S. deficit. In the third quarter, however, Canada recouped about $650 million of her lost reserves, and the U.S. position was correspondingly hurt.

Because Canada now has recovered most of her reserves, officials said the U.S. payments deficit might not be affected so significantly by Canadian developments in this final quarter of the year. This could not be stated as a certainty, however, since Canada is trying to more than make up for earlier difficulties by offering strong attractions for foreign capital.

Runaway Turk Tank Kills Six Children

KARS, Turkey (AP) — A runaway army tank mowed down marching school children in a Turkish Republic Day parade here Monday, killing 6 and critically injuring 12 others and a teacher.

Enraged parents and spectators turned on troops after the 50-ton tank went out of control on the main street in this city on the Soviet border. They demonstrated outside the hospital where the injured were taken and the area had to be cordoned off by soldiers and police.

Two Killed When Truck Rams Train

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — At least two persons were killed and a dozen others injured Monday when a gravel truck rammed into a Santa Fe passenger train, toppling the diesel locomotive and four cars.

The driver of the truck was killed instantly. A Marine died en route to a hospital after his leg was cut off in the ancident at a crossing in the Southern California city some 30 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

Investigators said the truck crashed broadside into the center of the train at a bridge at Katella Avenue and State College Boulevard. The diesal, two passenger coaches and two mail cars toppled, and a number of the estimated 100 passengers aboard temporarily were trapped inside the wreckage.

Spokesmen for the railroad said two flashing crossing lights were in operation whn the accident occurred. The seven-car San Diegan was en route from Los Angels to San Diego.

Ambulances from surrounding communities were called to the scene and emergency supplies were rushed to hospitals in the area from Los Angeles.

Attendants at St. Joseph's Hospital where 12 injured passengers were taken for treatment later described the injuries as "minor" and all were released.

Kennedy To Hold News Conference Thursday

The conference will be carried live on television and radio.

Kennedy's last news conference was on Sept. 13.

French Assume De Gaulle Will Remain At Helm

PARIS (AP)—Paris newspapers pulled out big black type Monday to proclaim "De Gaulle Stays."

No official word has come from the president since the results were tabulated of Sunday's referendum on popular election of future presidents. He stayed at his country home at Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises in eastern France, resting and reflecting, and apparently confided his thoughts to no one.

But official circles seemed to be taking it for granted the president would return to Paris Tuesday, and preside over the weekly cabinet meeting Wednesday.

The election results showed that the project for direct election of De Gaulle's successors—rather than by an indirect sort of electoral college system—had captured 61.76 per cent approval from those who cast ballots. The black note was that because of abstentions and "no" votes, only 46.44 per cent of the registered voters had given formal backing.

"The 61.76 per cent 'oui' vote is certainly a remarkable victory, in view of the fact that almost all the political parties and most of the newspapers were against it," one source close to the government said. "I can't see how anyone could interpret it as a result that would cause the president to leave."

This echoed a statement from Premier Georges Pompidou, who said he could find nothing "mediocre or doubtful" about the returns.

De Gaulle said in a radio-television speech during the campaign that he would be forced to retire from office if the results were "weak, mediocre or doubtful."

Two-Day Halt During Thant Havana Visit

Action Requested By U.N. Chief; U.S. Continues Vigil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States announced Monday night the temporary lifting of its naval blockade of Cuba at the request of Acting Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations.

U Thant is to meet Tuesday with Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro in Havana in an effort to work out details for U.N. supervision of the removal of Soviet nuclear missiles from the island. Soviet Premier Khrushchev announced Sunday that he has ordered such a withdrawal and agreed to U.N. supervision.

The White House announced the lifting of the blockade against shipments of offensive weapons would be effective about 6 a.m. EST Tuesday and would last through the two days of U Thant's visit.

Whether it will be reimposed after that period will depend on the situation at that time.

The blockading U.S. warships meanwhile will remain on station at sea.

May Smooth Path For Thant,

White House press secretary Pierre Salinger told newsmen he does not know why U Thant requested the lifting of the blockade, which was imposed last Tuesday. It seemed a good guess that U Thant believes this gesture would smooth his way in discussions with Castro, who has not indicated any wholehearted approval of Khrushchev's decision.

Neither the White House nor the Defense Department made any mention of the U.S. aerial surveillance of the Soviet missile bases which can determine whether the orders Khrushchev reported giving are being carried out.

The lifting of the blockade, even on a temporary basis, was at least a partial reversal of the frequently stated U.S. position that it would not change its present course until given solid evidence that the orders to dismantle the bases and remove the weapons are being executed.

No Russ Ships Near Area

In fact, however, the announced suspension of the blockade was largely a gesture since both State and Defense departments have said that as of Sunday there were no Soviet ships within two or three days' sailing time of the blockade area. And, as far as is known, only Soviet ships have been used to carry the critical offensive weapons to the islands.

A few ships of other nationalities were reported near the blockade zone Monday night, including two Turkish vessels reported to be carrying cargoes of wheat from the Soviet Union.

Earlier Monday, the United States brushed aside a Castro demand that this nation give up its Cuban naval base at Guantanamo, and continued aerial reconnaissance over the island while maintaining the naval blockade.

Meanwhile, there was no answer to the key question of whether the orders the Soviet leader announced Sunday morning are being carried out.

The Defense Department late Monday afternoon announced that aerial reconnaissance flights were made over Cuba Monday and "all aircraft returned safely."

But Assistant Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester told a news conference that pictures made will not be developed before Tuesday. And he would not say whether flights were made Sunday, from which pictures presumably would have been available Monday.

Prior to this somewhat cryptic announcement, both the Pentagon and White House both had persistently turned aside questions about whether there is evidence that the reported orders by Khrushchev are or are not being carried out.

Hunt Launched For Two Baltimore Jail Breakers

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two jail escapees, one of them awaiting trial on two charges of murder, were the object of a statewide search Monday night.

The two were among four prisoners who broke out of Baltimore City Jail about 7 p. m. Monday. Two were recaptured within 20 minutes of their escape.

The two who eluded police were identified as William Joseph James, 29, a Negro, and Doyle Delmar Royal 27, white. It was not known if either was armed, but police said James was considered extremely dangerous.

James was being held for trial in the shooting of William H. Randall, 59, and Robert Moore, 23, both of Baltimore. They were killed during a liquor store robbery March 9.

Royal is charged with taking $2,336 from a Baltimore supermarket August 21.

Police said the five prisoners escaped from a maximum security block in the jail. Four of them used a rope made of sheets to climb over the jail wall. A fifth man, James Robert Gale, fell back inside while attempting to climb out and was recaptured.

Two men, Robert Venable and Roy Allan Nixt, were recaptured by police within 20 minutes. Nixt is awaiting trial on charges of killing a policeman. Venable is charged on 3 counts of robbery.

Police said they did not know how the men escaped from the maximum security block.

Nation Must Not Lower Its Guard, Ike Declares

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI)—Former President Eisenhower warned Monday night that the United States must not relax with the easing of the Cuban situation because the Communists have not given up their "determination to bury us."

"Khrushchev merely promised to withdraw in part - from one forward base of threat to our security," Eisenhower told a Republican rally in Syracuse.

"The easily broken promise is fundamental in Communist strategy," he said. "The partial retreat is Communistic tactics as usual. Only the scene and the subject are new: A missile base off our coast.

"The conflict of ideas, ideologies which defines what we have called the cold war, will continue. Only when the Communists give over their others: When they end their domination of once free nations by force will we truly be able to devote all our energies and resources to the fundamental purposes of human betterment."

The general said he "was happy" that President Kennedy was able to take the strong action under a resolution that was first brought to the attention of Congress by Republican leaders.

Returning to domestic issues, Eisenhower said, the Kennedy administration is bound on a "give-away program."

"They (Democratic administration) seem confident that a majority, in even a sovereign state, can be largely influenced by the inuendo that one candidate has no access to federal funds, and his opponent has free entry through all doors in Washington," the former President said.

Eleanor Roosevelt's Condition Unchanged

NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was described by a family spokesman Monday as "holding her own" but still seriously ill.

The spokesman said the 78-year-old former First Lady remained "much the same" as Sunday when it was said the outlook for her future was uncertain.

Mrs. Roosevelt spent some time in a hospital for treatment of anemia and a lung infection. She was discharged 11 days ago and has been confined to her home since with visits only from her immediate family.

Thant's Crisis Talks Go Smoothly

U.N. Secretary Departs Today To Meet Castro

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —U Thant conferred Monday night with Premier Khrushchev's special envoy amid indications that the Acting Secretary-General's negotiations on the Cuban crisis were going smoothly.

Thant met for a second time with Vasily V. Kuznetsov, first deputy Soviet foreign minister, on the eve of Thant's departure Tuesday morning for Cuba and talks with Prime Minister Fidel Castro on steps to get Soviet missiles out of Cuba.

Thant met also during the day with U.S. and Cuban representatives.

The U.N. released a letter Thant sent to Khrushchev Sunday in which he expressed belief the situation in the Caribbean area would be normalized when the missiles are removed and the bases dismantled under U.N. supervision as agreed to by Khrushchev.

Brazilian Airliner Chartered

Thant is going to Havana in a U.N.-chartered Brazilian airliner with a team of 29 U.N. officials and military experts. He plans to stay two or three days.

His task was admittedly a delicate one—to win Castro's approval for formulas Thant worked out here in conjunction with U.S. and Soviet officials.

Thant's first meeting Monday morning with Kuznetsov lasted two hours.

A U.N. spokesman who was present said it was a good meeting, and that the Soviet delegate came up with "constructive suggestions about practical steps for the implementation of agreements already reached with the aim of settling the crisis over Cuba."

Thant met also with Cuban Ambassador Mario Garcia-Inchaustegui, who told Thant his visit to Havana is most welcome. He said Raul Primelles, Cuba's deputy permanent U.N. representative, would accompany Thant on the Havana flight.

Thant, Stevenson Confer

Thant also met Monday with U.S. Chief Delegate Adlai E. Stevenson and John J. McCloy, a veteran U.S. troubleshooter who is chairman of President Kennedy's newly appointed three-man coordinating committee on the Cuban crisis.

The other two members are Undersecretary of State George W. Ball and Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric.

McCloy has been special adviser to Stevenson during the Cuban crisis. Ball and Gilpatric rushed from Washington to confer with McCloy and Stevenson prior to their appointment with Thant.

The three-man committee will report directly to President Kennedy, but operate under the supervision of Stevenson, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

Humphrey Hails Break In Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic whip Hubert H. Humphrey said after seeing Prsident Kennedy Monday night that the break in the Cuban crisis was "a great victory for peace and America."

But Sen. Barry Goldwater, the Republican campaign chairman, said President Kennedy will be handing Russia "an important victory" if he firmly pledges not to invade Cuba."

Humphrey, interviewed after he discussed the Cuban situation with Kennedy, said: "Of course I feel relieved ... I feel the President has handled the situation in a wise, prudent and statesmanlike way."

"We have had differences in the past," said Douglas Gibson, spokesman for the British Sun Bathing Association, "but we are now united. We will now be stronger in approaching local councils for the acquisition of public beaches."

The other organization is the Federation of British Sun Clubs.

U.S. Balance Of Payments Deficit Rises

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. balance of payments deficit took a sharp turn for the worse in the July-September quarter. However, officials emphasized they see no reason yet to predict a longer-term setback.

The Federal Reserve Board, in its October bulletin, reported that the payments deficit in the first nine months of the year was running at an annual rate of $1.8 billion, on the basis of preliminary estimates.

This meant the annual rate in the third quarter was $2.6 billion compared with $872 million in the preceding three months. The 1961 deficit was $2.5 billion.

The payments deficit represents the difference between the amount of money Americans spend, lend, invest and give away abroad and the lesser amount received from foreign sources. Deficits give foreign government and central banks surplus dollars that they may use to buy American gold.

Officials noted that the July-September step-up in the deficit largely reflected a change in Canada's monetary situation.

In the first half of the year, Canada lost about $900 million of reserves, mostly to the United States. This helped reduce the U.S. deficit. In the third quarter, however, Canada recouped about $650 million of her lost reserves, and the U.S. position was correspondingly hurt.

Because Canada now has recovered most of her reserves, officials said the U.S. payments deficit might not be affected so significantly by Canadian developments in this final quarter of the year. This could not be stated as a certainty, however, since Canada is trying to more than make up for earlier difficulties by offering strong attractions for foreign capital.

Runaway Turk Tank Kills Six Children

KARS, Turkey (AP) — A runaway army tank mowed down marching school children in a Turkish Republic Day parade here Monday, killing 6 and critically injuring 12 others and a teacher.

Enraged parents and spectators turned on troops after the 50-ton tank went out of control on the main street in this city on the Soviet border. They demonstrated outside the hospital where the injured were taken and the area had to be cordoned off by soldiers and police.

Two Killed When Truck Rams Train

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — At least two persons were killed and a dozen others injured Monday when a gravel truck rammed into a Santa Fe passenger train, toppling the diesel locomotive and four cars.

The driver of the truck was killed instantly. A Marine died en route to a hospital after his leg was cut off in the ancident at a crossing in the Southern California city some 30 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

Investigators said the truck crashed broadside into the center of the train at a bridge at Katella Avenue and State College Boulevard. The diesal, two passenger coaches and two mail cars toppled, and a number of the estimated 100 passengers aboard temporarily were trapped inside the wreckage.

Spokesmen for the railroad said two flashing crossing lights were in operation whn the accident occurred. The seven-car San Diegan was en route from Los Angels to San Diego.

Ambulances from surrounding communities were called to the scene and emergency supplies were rushed to hospitals in the area from Los Angeles.

Attendants at St. Joseph's Hospital where 12 injured passengers were taken for treatment later described the injuries as "minor" and all were released.

Kennedy To Hold News Conference Thursday

The conference will be carried live on television and radio.

Kennedy's last news conference was on Sept. 13.

French Assume De Gaulle Will Remain At Helm

PARIS (AP)—Paris newspapers pulled out big black type Monday to proclaim "De Gaulle Stays."

No official word has come from the president since the results were tabulated of Sunday's referendum on popular election of future presidents. He stayed at his country home at Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises in eastern France, resting and reflecting, and apparently confided his thoughts to no one.

But official circles seemed to be taking it for granted the president would return to Paris Tuesday, and preside over the weekly cabinet meeting Wednesday.

The election results showed that the project for direct election of De Gaulle's successors—rather than by an indirect sort of electoral college system—had captured 61.76 per cent approval from those who cast ballots. The black note was that because of abstentions and "no" votes, only 46.44 per cent of the registered voters had given formal backing.

"The 61.76 per cent 'oui' vote is certainly a remarkable victory, in view of the fact that almost all the political parties and most of the newspapers were against it," one source close to the government said. "I can't see how anyone could interpret it as a result that would cause the president to leave."

This echoed a statement from Premier Georges Pompidou, who said he could find nothing "mediocre or doubtful" about the returns.

De Gaulle said in a radio-television speech during the campaign that he would be forced to retire from office if the results were "weak, mediocre or doubtful."

Nation Must Not Lower Its Guard, Ike Declares

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI)—Former President Eisenhower warned Monday night that the United States must not relax with the easing of the Cuban situation because the Communists have not given up their "determination to bury us."

"Khrushchev merely promised to withdraw in part - from one forward base of threat to our security," Eisenhower told a Republican rally in Syracuse.

"The easily broken promise is fundamental in Communist strategy," he said. "The partial retreat is Communistic tactics as usual. Only the scene and the subject are new: A missile base off our coast.

"The conflict of ideas, ideologies which defines what we have called the cold war, will continue. Only when the Communists give over their others: When they end their domination of once free nations by force will we truly be able to devote all our energies and resources to the fundamental purposes of human betterment."

The general said he "was happy" that President Kennedy was able to take the strong action under a resolution that was first brought to the attention of Congress by Republican leaders.

Returning to domestic issues, Eisenhower said, the Kennedy administration is bound on a "give-away program."

"They (Democratic administration) seem confident that a majority, in even a sovereign state, can be largely influenced by the inuendo that one candidate has no access to federal funds, and his opponent has free entry through all doors in Washington," the former President said.

Two-Day Halt During Thant Havana Visit

Action Requested By U.N. Chief; U.S. Continues Vigil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States announced Monday night the temporary lifting of its naval blockade of Cuba at the request of Acting Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations.

U Thant is to meet Tuesday with Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro in Havana in an effort to work out details for U.N. supervision of the removal of Soviet nuclear missiles from the island. Soviet Premier Khrushchev announced Sunday that he has ordered such a withdrawal and agreed to U.N. supervision.

The White House announced the lifting of the blockade against shipments of offensive weapons would be effective about 6 a.m. EST Tuesday and would last through the two days of U Thant's visit.

Whether it will be reimposed after that period will depend on the situation at that time.

The blockading U.S. warships meanwhile will remain on station at sea.

May Smooth Path For Thant

White House press secretary Pierre Salinger told newsmen he does not know why U Thant requested the lifting of the blockade, which was imposed last Tuesday. It seemed a good guess that U Thant believes this gesture would smooth his way in discussions with Castro, who has not indicated any wholehearted approval of Khrushchev's decision.

Neither the White House nor the Defense Department made any mention of the U.S. aerial surveillance of the Soviet missile bases which can determine whether the orders Khrushchev reported giving are being carried out.

The lifting of the blockade, even on a temporary basis, was at least a partial reversal of the frequently stated U.S. position that it would not change its present course until given solid evidence that the orders to dismantle the bases and remove the weapons are being executed.

No Russ Ships Near Area

In fact, however, the announced suspension of the blockade was largely a gesture since both State and Defense departments have said that as of Sunday there were no Soviet ships within two or three days' sailing time of the blockade area. And, as far as is known, only Soviet ships have been used to carry the critical offensive weapons to the islands.

A few ships of other nationalities were reported near the blockade zone Monday night, including two Turkish vessels reported to be carrying cargoes of wheat from the Soviet Union.

Earlier Monday, the United States brushed aside a Castro demand that this nation give up its Cuban naval base at Guantanamo, and continued aerial reconnaissance over the island while maintaining the naval blockade.

Meanwhile, there was no answer to the key question of whether the orders the Soviet leader announced Sunday morning are being carried out.

The Defense Department late Monday afternoon announced that aerial reconnaissance flights were made over Cuba Monday and "all aircraft returned safely."

But Assistant Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester told a news conference that pictures made will not be developed before Tuesday. And he would not say whether flights were made Sunday, from which pictures presumably would have been available Monday.

Prior to this somewhat cryptic announcement, both the Pentagon and White House both had persistently turned aside questions about whether there is evidence that the reported orders by Khrushchev are or are not being carried out.

Eleanor Roosevelt's Condition Unchanged

NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was described by a family spokesman Monday as "holding her own" but still seriously ill.

The spokesman said the 78-year-old former First Lady remained "much the same" as Sunday when it was said the outlook for her future was uncertain.

Mrs. Roosevelt spent some time in a hospital for treatment of anemia and a lung infection. She was discharged 11 days ago and has been confined to her home since with visits only from her immediate family.

Fugitive Financier Flies Home To Face Charges

NEW YORK (AP)—Runaway financier Edward M. Gilbert abandoned a Brazilian sanctuary Monday and flew home to face charges that he stole $2 million in a big stock market deal. He arrived smiling and jovial.

Gilbert, 39, skipped to Rio de Janeiro four months ago. Presumably, he could have sat it out there without prosecution for as long as he desired.

Instead, he chose to return to the waiting arms of federal and state officials, who have lodged enough criminal charges against him to put him behind bars for the rest of his life—if they can convict him.

"I'm glad to be home," Gilbert told newsmen. "I left under nervous shock and emotional strain. I came back when I regained my health, both mentally and physically, enough to cope with my problems."

Gilbert had admitted diverting $1,953,000 from E.L. Bruce Co., stock coup that was wrecked by last spring's tumbling market. But he entered formal pleas of innocent to charges that he stole any money for his own use.

However, in State Supreme Court, Gilbert phrased his plea as "not guilty, at present," indicating he might be hopeful of an eventual reduction in the severity of the state's charges. He posted $10,000 bail with the state.

In federal court, where Gilbert was freed in $15,000 bond, his lawyer, Arnold Bauman, declared: "Here is a man who in a three-week period was reduced from a very, very rich man, indeed, to a man overwhelmingly in debt."

Bauman said Gilbert fled the country June 12 because, as his financial structure tumbled about his head, he was reduced to "what was obviously a state of shock."

From the outset of his flight to South America, Gilbert had indicated he planned to return and fight the charges. He had once declared: "I will pay back everything I owe if it takes the rest of my life."

Cuban Exiles Vow No Letup In Their Fight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cuban exiles, perhaps the only persons in the Western world who were disappointed by the Soviet decision to dismantle the Cuban missile bases, vowed Monday to continue their fight against the Fidel Castro regime.

Alpha 66, the gunboat raiding group, announced Monday it has merged forces with "The Second Front of Escambray," a commando-actionist group commanded by former Castro Maj. Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo.

The Student Revolutionary Directorate (DRE), the organization which shot up the Rosita de Horneda Hotel in suburban Havana because Soviet bloc technicians were housed there, promised to continue the fight in a declaration from Mexico City.

The exile colony in the United States generally was hopeful last week that the U. S. blockade would lead to any invasion to rid the hemisphere of the Castro regime. Cuban youths flocked to U.S. Army recruiting stations.

Although the military excursions against Castro by the various uncoordinated exile units have been "suspended" pending outcome of the U. S. blockade, the decision to continue the struggle has been announced by the more aggressive groups.

Council President Howard Pyle told safety experts at the 50th National Safety Congress and Exposition that full adoption of the council's action program could cut the toll on the highways in half.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wreckers who had most of their work done by a fire moved onto the site Monday to finish off a six-story building with a wrecking ball.

A brick shell was all that remained of the vacant building burned out by a 12-alarm fire Sunday night. The fire also damaged a building next door and both were scheduled for demolition as part of Baltimore's urban renewal.

Six firemen were injured as 300 men with 75 pieces of equipment fought the flames for 2½ hours. The fire attracted a crowd of 10,000. The cause was not determined. Total assessed valuation of both buildings exceeded $100,000.

BALTIMORE (AP) — A 50-year-old woman was severely beaten early Monday by two men who had taken her to a vacant house.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Police have charged William Irby, 35, with homicide in the fatal stabbing of a 33-year-old paralytic.

The victim was William Walker. He died at St. Joseph's Hospital Sunday night about an hour after the stabbing.

Police said they found a knife handle in a trash can near the bar where Irby was arrested. Irby's wife told police she was in Walker's apartment with him when he was stabbed.

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Maryland State Employment Service says it made more non-agricultural job placements last month than it has for any September in the past 10 years.

Stephen C. Cromwell, executive director of the Department of Employment Security, said there is a growing need for the white-collar worker, college graduates and persons with professional and semi-professional experience.

Clerical, sales and professional placements increased 59.5 per cent from September, 1961, and wholesale and retail placements showed a 70 per cent increase.

Obscene Phone Call Traced To Baltimore Cop

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Maryland's law against misuse of the telephone has resulted in charges against a Baltimore City policeman of making an obscene call to an Essex woman.

Police said the woman, Mrs. Dorothy Horney, had the telephone company monitor her calls after receiving frequent anonymous calls in recent months in which obscene language was used.

When a 20-minute call was made to Mrs. Horney last Thursday, the call was traced to the telephone of Edward H. Charlebois, 24, also of Essex. Baltimore County detectives arrested him next day, after questioning him.

Charlebois is to receive a hearing Wednesday in Towson Police Court. Conviction carries a year's imprisonment, $500 fine or both.

Police said Mrs. Horney did not know Charlebois, that her name apparently was chosen at random from the telephone book.

S&L Firm Removed From State Control

BALTIMORE (AP) — Phoenix Savings and Loan Association, the first ever subjected to action under Maryland's new savings and loan regulatory law, was removed Monday from under state control.

Judge Reuben Oppenheimer signed an order putting into effect the reorganization of the $1,330,000 association and ending 15 months of management by the state.

Withdrawals by depositors of up to 10 per cent will be permitted after the association opens its doors for business again, but full withdrawals will have to be gradual over a period of six years under the reorganization.

50-Foot Hotdog Ready; Search For Bun Futile

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI)—A 50-foot hotdog, billed as the "world's biggest," lay in lonely majesty Monday while its admirers sought a bun.

Already conquered was the problem of hauling the monarch from its birthplace at the Made-Rite Sausage Co. to the scene of its triumph; a homecoming barbecue for students at American River Junior College.

"We will," said Made-Rite General Manager Thores Johnson, "hire a 40-foot flatbed truck." This does not mean that 10 feet of wiener will dangle unbecomingly during the four mile trip. For, as Johnson explained, "he is pliable and can be bent."

Nor will there be any difficulty in preparing this formidable frankfurter for eating. A student spokesman explained that the youths had already collected enough firebrick to build a 55-foot barbecue at a suburban shopping center where the celebration will take place Friday night.

But no one yet has found a 50-foot bun. Miss Norma Slater, coordinator for student activities at the college, reported that one local bakery tried for 38 feet and missed.

"Unless someone does something," she said, "we'll have to chop him up and serve him on regular little buns."

The world's biggest hotdog is two inches in diamter and weighs about 40 pounds. It contains enough beef and pork to make about 400 regular frankfurters, which are only 5½ inches in length.

Congress Candidate To State 'Voterama'

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — A Republican candidate for Congress will launch a 25-hour "voterama" Tuesday which will include morning coffee sessions, afternoon handshaking tours and middle-of-the-night lunchcounter meetings.

Joe M. Baker Jr., GOP candidate for the house of representatives from Maryland's 5th District, said his tour will begin at 6:45 a.m. and end at 8:15 a.m., Wednesday.

"One thousand votes will decide who is elected Nov. 6 to represent Maryland's 5th District," Baker said. "I intend to shake one thousand hands and talk to one thousand voters during the voterama to assure victory."

Baker opposes Rep. Richard E. Lankford, Democratic incumbent, in the race for Congress.

Maryland Briefs

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wreckers who had most of their work done by a fire moved onto the site Monday to finish off a six-story building with a wrecking ball.

A brick shell was all that remained of the vacant building burned out by a 12-alarm fire Sunday night. The fire also damaged a building next door and both were scheduled for demolition as part of Baltimore's urban renewal.

Six firemen were injured as 300 men with 75 pieces of equipment fought the flames for 2½ hours. The fire attracted a crowd of 10,000. The cause was not determined. Total assessed valuation of both buildings exceeded $100,000.

TIMONIUM, Md. (AP) — Prominent names like Eisenhower and Roosevelt will be among the exhibitors for the 16th annual Eastern Livestock Show Nov. 10-15 at the Timonium fairgrounds.

Also competing for 1,700 ribbons, plaques and trophies — plus $52,000 in prize money — will be animals entered by Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon and Ohio industrialist Cyrus Eaton. The show is the largest east of Chicago.

BALTIMORE (AP) — A 50-year-old woman was severely beaten early Monday by two men who had taken her to a vacant house.

Police found Mrs. Charlotte Amelia Winneg partially clothed, semiconscious and incoherent in the vacant house. At Union Memorial Hospital, where she was listed in serious condition, doctors said she suffered three facial fractures and a possible skull fracture.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Police have charged William Irby, 35, with homicide in the fatal stabbing of a 33-year-old paralytic.

The victim was William Walker. He died at St. Joseph's Hospital Sunday night about an hour after the stabbing.

Police said they found a knife handle in a trash can near the bar where Irby was arrested. Irby's wife told police she was in Walker's apartment with him when he was stabbed.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—Gov. Lawrence Monday reappointed state health secretary Charles L. Wilbar as Pennsylvania's representative to the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin.

At the same time, Walter A. Lyon of Camp Hill was named an alternate representative. Lyon is director of the division of sanitary engineering in the state health department.

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Maryland State Employment Service says it made more non-agricultural job placements last month than it has for any September in the past 10 years.

Stephen C. Cromwell, executive director of the Department of Employment Security, said there is a growing need for the white-collar worker, college graduates and persons with professional and semi-professional experience.

Clerical, sales and professional placements increased 59.5 per cent from September, 1961, and wholesale and retail placements showed a 70 per cent increase.

EASTON, Md. (AP) — The collision of a car and a dump truck loaded with bricks took the life of a young Talbot County woman from a prominent family Monday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lee Sands Pardoe, 20, of Easton, died at Memorial Hospital in Easton of head and neck injuries, shortly after the accident happened at the intersection of U.S. 50 and Maryland 213.

President Kennedy followed up on the diplomatic front Monday by appointing a special three-man committee to work out arrangements with acting U.N. Secretary-General U Thant, who flies to Cuba Tuesday.

Obscene Phone Call Traced To Baltimore Cop

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Maryland's law against misuse of the telephone has resulted in charges against a Baltimore City policeman of making an obscene call to an Essex woman.

Police said the woman, Mrs. Dorothy Horney, had the telephone company monitor her calls after receiving frequent anonymous calls in recent months in which obscene language was used.

When a 20-minute call was made to Mrs. Horney last Thursday, the call was traced to the telephone of Edward H. Charlebois, 24, also of Essex. Baltimore County detectives arrested him next day, after questioning him.

Charlebois is to receive a hearing Wednesday in Towson Police Court. Conviction carries a year's imprisonment, $500 fine or both.

Police said Mrs. Horney did not know Charlebois, that her name apparently was chosen at random from the telephone book.

S&L Firm Removed From State Control

BALTIMORE (AP) — Phoenix Savings and Loan Association, the first ever subjected to action under Maryland's new savings and loan regulatory law, was removed Monday from under state control.

Judge Reuben Oppenheimer signed an order putting into effect the reorganization of the $1,330,000 association and ending 15 months of management by the state.

Withdrawals by depositors of up to 10 per cent will be permitted after the association opens its doors for business again, but full withdrawals will have to be gradual over a period of six years under the reorganization.

Synagogue Terror

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Three youths were hunted by police Monday for setting off a gasoline bomb Saturday night in front of a Jewish temple and wounding two young girls with shotgun blasts. The girls, Lucia Levy, 13, and Alicia Elbert, 11, were not seriously hurt.

50-Foot Hotdog Ready; Search For Bun Futile

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI)—A 50-foot hotdog, billed as the "world's biggest," lay in lonely majesty Monday while its admirers sought a bun.

Already conquered was the problem of hauling the monarch from its birthplace at the Made-Rite Sausage Co. to the scene of its triumph; a homecoming barbecue for students at American River Junior College.

"We will," said Made-Rite General Manager Thores Johnson, "hire a 40-foot flatbed truck." This does not mean that 10 feet of wiener will dangle unbecomingly during the four mile trip. For, as Johnson explained, "he is pliable and can be bent."

Nor will there be any difficulty in preparing this formidable frankfurter for eating. A student spokesman explained that the youths had already collected enough firebrick to build a 55-foot barbecue at a suburban shopping center where the celebration will take place Friday night.

But no one yet has found a 50-foot bun. Miss Norma Slater, coordinator for student activities at the college, reported that one local bakery tried for 38 feet and missed.

"Unless someone does something," she said, "we'll have to chop him up and serve him on regular little buns."

The world's biggest hotdog is two inches in diamter and weighs about 40 pounds. It contains enough beef and pork to make about 400 regular frankfurters, which are only 5½ inches in length.

Congress Candidate To State 'Voterama'

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — A Republican candidate for Congress will launch a 25-hour "voterama" Tuesday which will include morning coffee sessions, afternoon handshaking tours and middle-of-the-night lunchcounter meetings.

Joe M. Baker Jr., GOP candidate for the house of representatives from Maryland's 5th District, said his tour will begin at 6:45 a.m. and end at 8:15 a.m., Wednesday.

"One thousand votes will decide who is elected Nov. 6 to represent Maryland's 5th District," Baker said. "I intend to shake one thousand hands and talk to one thousand voters during the voterama to assure victory."

Baker opposes Rep. Richard E. Lankford, Democratic incumbent, in the race for Congress.

Fife Symington Undergoes Surgery

BALTIMORE (AP) — Fife Symington, Republican candidate for the House of Representatives from Maryland's 2nd District, underwent surgery Monday at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

A spokesman said the gall bladder operation was a success, and Symington hoped to resume active campaigning before the election next Tuesday.

Hume was admitted Sunday to Georgetown Hospital, where his condition was reported to be good.

Mrs. Hume said results of the tests, including X-rays, probably will be known in 48 hours.

Oakland Club Will Hear Dorothy White

Miss Dorothy Stone White, director of drama at State Teachers College, Frostburg, will present a program at the meeting of the Oakland Civic Club today, in the William James Hotel. Mrs. Stuart F. Hamill, Jr., is program chairman.

Entitled "Return Engagement," Miss White's presentation will consist of a series of scenes from the books: "The Devil's Advocate," "The Once and Future King," and "A Man For All Seasons." Three Broadway plays were adapted from these works. Alan Jay Lerner used T. H. White's book, "The Once and Future King," as the source of the musical, "Camelot." The title of the program, "Return Engagement," also, reflects Miss White's second appearance before the Oakland Civic Club.

A fourth number will feature two students in the Drama department at the College — Anne Brindsmade, a freshman and John Goss, a senior, both, from Cumberland — in a sequence from Act I of "Caesar and Cleopatra" by George Bernard Shaw.

Miss White's interest in the theatre stems from her high school days in Marietta, Ohio, where she had a leading part in the Senior Class Play. In both Marietta College and West Virginia University she belonged to the campus dramatic organizations.

She received her A.B. and M.A. degrees from West Virginia University. In 1961, she was the recipient of a scholarship to the Episcopal Faculty Summer School in Theology and Religion at Cambridge, Mass. There she studied the modern dramatists who, in their writings, reflect their concern with religious thought.

Miss White is a member of Alpha Psi Omega, national dramatic fraternity, and of Alpha Xi Delta, women's national social fraternity. At the college she is director of the recently installed Gamma Psi Chapter of Alpha Xi Delta.

Currently, Miss White is directing the Jane Cowl stage success, "Smilin' Through." The play will be presented November 7-8, in Compton Hall auditorium under the auspices of Little Theatre and Alpha Psi Omega.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We have an adorable, 11-year-old, freckle-faced girl. She is a charmer, Ann, but terribly stubborn.

It's useless to deny her anything because her grandparents will buy whatever she wants. When I send her to her room for punishment she has a grand time because she has a color TV, a $150 doll house, and a pink telephone her grand parents had installed because she complained that Mummy and Daddy talk on the phone too much.

Yesterday she refused to hang up her coat and hat — just dropped them on the floor. When I asked her to please hang her wraps in the closet she said, "I worked hard in school today and I don't feel like it." I sent her to her room and she promptly phoned her grandmother and shouted, "HELP! I'm a prisoner!" What can I do with this child? — B. R.

DEAR B. R.: First solve the grandparent problem. Tell them if they send your over-indulged daughter another gift which has not been approved by you in advance, it will be returned.

When the child misbehaves, send her to her room — but first remove the color TV, the doll house, and yes — the telephone. Then let "the charmer" sit there till her freckles fall off.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you find space in your column to say something about a subject that has been a sore spot with me for a long time?

I am a high school teacher who loves my students. I am particularly concerned about some of my young girls. What on earth are they doing with their hair these days?

So many of the girls returned to school this fall with those hideous bee-hive and bouffant hairdos. They look ratty and out of place. And it's terribly unhealthy for the hair. These girls tell me they sleep in plastic hair sacks, wrapped around flannel cloths, tissue paper caps and what-not. They don't use a brush, or even a comb, from one week to the next. Their hair is frizzed, sprayed, tortured and twisted.

How much lovelier they would look, Ann, if they cut their hair and kept it brushed, shining and bright. A high school girl should look like a freshly scrubbed young student, not a burlesque queen.

If you pass this word it might make the point. Thank you.

— STAMFORD, CONN.

DEAR STAMFORD: Your letter is a precise echo of my sentiments. I hope your message penetrates those lacquered mops and starts a trend back to wholesome, All American hairdos.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a widow 49 years old. I live in a $30,000 home which is paid for. I have $25,000 in the bank and $30,000 invested in stocks. My living costs $400 a month. The cash is going fast yet I don't know where to cut down. If I sold my car I would have to depend on friends, and I'd hate to do this.

I'd like to take a job but my friends tell me my age is against me. I worked in an accountant's office before I married and I'm sure if I brushed up I could be useful somewhere in business.

What should I do — sell this house and move into an apartment? Invest the money I now have in the bank? Keep trying to get a job, regardless of salary? Friends and relatives have been trying to advise me for two years and I still don't know what to do. Can you help me?

— FT. LAUDERDALE

DEAR FT. LANDERDALE: You don't need advice — you've had plenty. What you need is to decide what advice you're going to accept.

My sole suggestion is get a job. You'll feel much better knowing that SOME money is coming in. Even if you made a modest salary it would be better for your morale than sitting around watching your cash reserves melt away, or polling your friends about "what to do."

Secrets Of Charm

Build A Wardrobe To Match Your Way Of Life

Suit your wardrobe to your way of life!

These basics vary little with your activities: a cloth coat, a suit, a daytime dress, a casual dress, an after-five dress or separates, a hat, and three sets of accessories. One accessory set should complement your daytime basics; another makes a sports outfit of your suit and casual dress; the third glamorizes your suit, daytime dress, and after-five costume. Color-coordinate all of your basics — with each other, and with your own coloring.

Although these indispensables are the core of a becoming wardrobe, it is true that you need other items as well, for appropriate and comfortable adornment. Choose them according to your occupation. Are you a homemaker, a business or professional woman, careerist and homemaker combined, or one whose position puts her often in the public eye?

Additional wardrobe items are suggested here for the life you lead:

HOMEMAKER (COUNTRY-SUBURBAN) — classic wool dress or separates, three all-purpose summer cottons, foul-weather gear, becoming work clothes in sturdy fabrics, relaxing clothes, hostess after-five, active sports or play clothes, dinner and evening clothes if you need them.

HOMEMAKER (URBAN) — work clothes in which you answer the doorbell without apologies, classic wool dress and cottons in which you can go shopping, lounging clothes, a hostess gowns or separates, active sports or play clothes, dinner and evening clothes as required.

CAREER WOMAN — tailored wool dress, two tailored summer dresses, a storm-wear costume (not a hodgepodge), lounging clothes that double for entertaining, active sports and play clothes, dinner and evening attire dependent upon your social life.

CAREER - HOMEMAKER — tailored summer dresses, coordinated storm wear, home-work clothes, casual lounging separates, hostess after-five, active sports and play clothes, dinner and evening attire as schedule dictates.

"SOCIALITE" — formal daytime costume (perhaps a dressy suit), at-home clothes, country tweeds, sports and play clothes, dinner suit, evening dresses and wraps.

Secrets Of Charm

Build A Wardrobe To Match Your Way Of Life

Suit your wardrobe to your way of life!

These basics vary little with your activities: a cloth coat, a suit, a daytime dress, a casual dress, an after-five dress or separates, a hat, and three sets of accessories. One accessory set should complement your daytime basics; another makes a sports outfit of your suit and casual dress; the third glamorizes your suit, daytime dress, and after-five costume. Color-coordinate all of your basics — with each other, and with your own coloring.

Although these indispensables are the core of a becoming wardrobe, it is true that you need other items as well, for appropriate and comfortable adornment. Choose them according to your occupation. Are you a homemaker, a business or professional woman, careerist and homemaker combined, or one whose position puts her often in the public eye?

Additional wardrobe items are suggested here for the life you lead:

HOMEMAKER (COUNTRY-SUBURBAN) — classic wool dress or separates, three all-purpose summer cottons, foul-weather gear, becoming work clothes in sturdy fabrics, relaxing clothes, hostess after-five, active sports or play clothes, dinner and evening clothes if you need them.

HOMEMAKER (URBAN) — work clothes in which you answer the doorbell without apologies, classic wool dress and cottons in which you can go shopping, lounging clothes, a hostess gowns or separates, active sports or play clothes, dinner and evening clothes as required.

CAREER WOMAN — tailored wool dress, two tailored summer dresses, a storm-wear costume (not a hodgepodge), lounging clothes that double for entertaining, active sports and play clothes, dinner and evening attire dependent upon your social life.

CAREER - HOMEMAKER — tailored summer dresses, coordinated storm wear, home-work clothes, casual lounging separates, hostess after-five, active sports and play clothes, dinner and evening attire as schedule dictates.

"SOCIALITE" — formal daytime costume (perhaps a dressy suit), at-home clothes, country tweeds, sports and play clothes, dinner suit, evening dresses and wraps.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We have an adorable, 11-year-old, freckle-faced girl. She is a charmer, Ann, but terribly stubborn.

It's useless to deny her anything because her grandparents will buy whatever she wants. When I send her to her room for punishment she has a grand time because she has a color TV, a $150 doll house, and a pink telephone her grand parents had installed because she complained that Mummy and Daddy talk on the phone too much.

Yesterday she refused to hang up her coat and hat — just dropped them on the floor. When I asked her to please hang her wraps in the closet she said, "I worked hard in school today and I don't feel like it." I sent her to her room and she promptly phoned her grandmother and shouted, "HELP! I'm a prisoner!" What can I do with this child? — B. R.

DEAR B. R.: First solve the grandparent problem. Tell them if they send your over-indulged daughter another gift which has not been approved by you in advance, it will be returned.

When the child misbehaves, send her to her room — but first remove the color TV, the doll house, and yes — the telephone. Then let "the charmer" sit there till her freckles fall off.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you find space in your column to say something about a subject that has been a sore spot with me for a long time?

I am a high school teacher who loves my students. I am particularly concerned about some of my young girls. What on earth are they doing with their hair these days?

So many of the girls returned to school this fall with those hideous bee-hive and bouffant hairdos. They look ratty and out of place. And it's terribly unhealthy for the hair. These girls tell me they sleep in plastic hair sacks, wrapped around flannel cloths, tissue paper caps and what-not. They don't use a brush, or even a comb, from one week to the next. Their hair is frizzed, sprayed, tortured and twisted.

How much lovelier they would look, Ann, if they cut their hair and kept it brushed, shining and bright. A high school girl should look like a freshly scrubbed young student, not a burlesque queen.

If you pass this word it might make the point. Thank you.

— STAMFORD, CONN.

DEAR STAMFORD: Your letter is a precise echo of my sentiments. I hope your message penetrates those lacquered mops and starts a trend back to wholesome, All American hairdos.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a widow 49 years old. I live in a $30,000 home which is paid for. I have $25,000 in the bank and $30,000 invested in stocks. My living costs $400 a month. The cash is going fast yet I don't know where to cut down. If I sold my car I would have to depend on friends, and I'd hate to do this.

I'd like to take a job but my friends tell me my age is against me. I worked in an accountant's office before I married and I'm sure if I brushed up I could be useful somewhere in business.

What should I do — sell this house and move into an apartment? Invest the money I now have in the bank? Keep trying to get a job, regardless of salary? Friends and relatives have been trying to advise me for two years and I still don't know what to do. Can you help me?

— FT. LAUDERDALE

DEAR FT. LANDERDALE: You don't need advice — you've had plenty. What you need is to decide what advice you're going to accept.

My sole suggestion is get a job. You'll feel much better knowing that SOME money is coming in. Even if you made a modest salary it would be better for your morale than sitting around watching your cash reserves melt away, or polling your friends about "what to do."

City Hall CD Procedure Aired At Council Meeting

Civil Defense matters were discussed at yesterday's meeting of the Mayor and Council, with Mrs. Lucile Roeder, commissioner of streets and public property, pointing out there is practically no "know how" on CD procedure at the City Hall.

It was brought out that the city has had no official coordinator with the Allegany County CD setup since the retirement of Arthur B. Gibson.

Mrs. Roeder suggested the appointment of Charles R. Nuzum, city engineer, as the official representative of the city on Civil Defense matters, and that Fire Chief Virgil A. Parker be the alternate representative. Council unanimously adopted a motion to this effect.

It also was suggested by the street commissioner that new personnel at the City Hall switchboard be given training in the city's Civil Defense procedure, and that copies of the city's setup and procedure be distributed to all departments.

Mayor Earl D. Chaney commented that most people apparently do not get "worked up" about Civil Defense, and few are aware of the city's program.

A request of the Algonquin Players was approved, permitting them to drop balloons from store windows advertising their next production, November 14-15.

In other matters, council approved the appointment of Frank P Hymes as a probationary member of the Police Department, the appointment being effective as of October 16.

The refund of $100 to each of two men, fined that amount in Police Court, was adopted after the city attorney, Hugh A. McMullen, explained the charges were dismissed following an appeal of the charges and fines.

Also adopted unanimously was a proclamation designating November 11 as Veterans Day.

Council also took favorable action on a request by the Civil Service Board that its Table of Organization be strictly followed in the various municipal departments. During pre-Council discussion it was explained that there was some laxity in departments regarding the temporary placement of employes.

Meter Receipts Up

Harry M. Whisner, meter inspector, submitted a report to the Mayor and Council yesterday that listed collections from the city's parking meters at $833.85 for the week ended October 21. The amount represented an increase of $69.40 from the previous week's report.

About 90 per cent of the nation's urban populations are said to endure air pollution.

Road Route Of Hospital Approved

A verbal agreement has been reached in connection with a solution to the route of the access roadway into the site of the new Sacred Heart Hospital on Haystack Mountain, according to William H. Geppert, attorney for the hospital.

Geppert said that after the filing of the suit by the Cumberland Real Estate Corporation, which owns a section of land over which the road traverses, numerous conferences were held with attorney for the real estate company, William Carscaden and Gorman Getty, which resulted in the settlement.

As a result of the agreement the S. T. Brotemarkle Company has started construction of the roadway. Geppert said that the real estate company objected to the height of a fill in a ravine which affected the land adjacent.

This was resolved so that the fill will be 10 feet high and not 20 feet as originally planned. Two knolls at either end of the fill will also be cut down to level off the area nearby.

The new road will run off Braddock Road at a point near the city limits and travel approximately a quarter of a mile into the hospital site atop the mountain. The grade will not exceed seven per cent and be conducive to safety to motor vehicles, Geppert said.

The Brotemarkle firm is doing the road construction for approximately $100,000.

Crisis Stand Gets Church Unit Backing

Rev. Russell E. Fink, president of the Allegany County Council of Churches, said the group has endorsed the six-point program of the National Council of Churches on the current international crisis.

The national church group expressed support for "renewed negotiations to deal with the changing issues now confronting the nations."

"We are hopeful that the Cuban people will be freed from foreign domination, and that we may all progress in political, economic and social well-being," the council announced.

Inspection Is Made For Sheep Scabies

An inspection of sheep on Allegany County farms for scabies did not turn up any infected animals, according to Joseph M. Steger, county farm agent.

Steger said that any farmer who keeps sheep and who has not been contacted can arrange to have an inspection by calling him.

Another test will be made next spring and this should decide whether an eradication program is required, Steger pointed out. The inspection here followed an outbreak of scabies in sheep flocks in other sections of Maryland.

Honors Received By Two Students

Mark Mamolen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Mamolen, Westernport, received third honors, said Dr. Stephen W. Roberts headmaster of the school.

Work Begins On Wills Creek Avenue Project

The Mayor and Council yesterday accepted the bid of Cumberland Contracting Company for improvements to Wills Creek Avenue.

The firm had submitted a bid of $19,643, and the only other offer made on the project was for $20,747 by the Hout Construction Company.

Work on the project began yesterday.

In action related to the Wills Creek Avenue project, Council authorized checks be issued to the owners of three parcels of land for purchase of easements required for the improvement work.

The checks were for $150 to Mary A. Sager; for the same amount to Charles W. and Virginia B. Sirbaugh, and for $50 to Adam R. and Virginia G. Killen.

Also authorized by council was payment of $350 to the Hout firm, the amount representing the final payment for the construction of a regulation ballfield adjacent to the city's sewage treatment plant. The ballfield contract was for $11,150.

Two firms submitted bids yesterday for installation of fencing around the ballfield. Referred to Mayor Earl D. Chaney for recommendation was a bid of $4,996 by the Regal Fence Company, and for $4,750 by the Cyclone Company.

Council accepted the "gratis" conveyance of Lots 25, 26 and 27 on Brown Avenue to the city by George F. Hazelwood Jr.

Robert C. Petersen, manager of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, extended commendation to Mrs. Lucile Roeder, street commissioner, for the new trash cans that have been placed around the city's business district. He commented that the receptacles were an improvement over the old containers.

Yesterday's meeting was opened with prayer offered by Rev. Jacob H. Snyder, pastor of Kingsley Methodist Church.

Walsh Issues Statement On Father-Son Remark

Del. William Walsh, Democratic candidate for State Senate from Allegany County, yesterday issued a statement chiding his opponent, George R. Hughes Jr., for a remark made last week about support being given him by his father, William C. Walsh.

Del. Walsh said:

In this campaign, I have made no attacks on anyone, and my only comments about my opponent, Mr. Hughes, with whom I have been friends all my life, have been directed solely at his criticisms of me. It would take too long to cover all he has said, but I do want to mention one matter.

Several days ago he stated that he faces in the election "a group of formidable opponents, namely the candidates, father and son," etc. I assume this is an effort to persuade the voters that my father is also running against him, or that there is something wrong in my father supporting me. My father, of course, is not a candidate, and the fact that I have his support seems to me to be quite natural.

I am confident that my opponent's father is giving him all the support he can, and, of course, the same thing is true of every other candidate on either ticket who is fortunate enough to have his father living.

On the other hand, if my opponent's objection to "father and son" candidates being against him refers not to my father, but to me and my son Billy, I direct his attention to the fact that Billy, who is only six years, is too young to run, and so is my other son, Jamie, who is just four months old. On the question of support, Billy has assured me that he is with me, and I am confident that Jamie is too, though he has not been able to talk to me about it, but certainly neither Billy nor Jamie poses any serious threat to my opponent in this election.

I accordingly respectfully suggest that my opponent forget about fathers and sons.

Trick Or Treat Time Change Asked

C. Glenn Watson Jr., president of the South Cumberland Business and Civic Association, yesterday asked Mayor and Council to change the day of Cumberland's Trick or Treat Night.

Watson explained that he was making the request on the basis that more people would be able to attend the South Cumberland celebration, sponsored annually by the business and civic group.

Although the pros and cons of the request were discussed, Council took no action, thereby keeping the Halloween activity on Wednesday, the time designated by action at last week's meeting. It was commented after the meeting that it was felt any change would have been too short notice for children.

Watson also invited the Mayor and Council, and chiefs of the Police and Fire departments, to participate in the Wednesday parade which highlights the celebration.

Stops Constipation Due to "Aging Colon"
New laxative discovery re-creates 3 essentials of normal regularity
As you grow older, the internal muscles of your colon wall also age, lose the strength that propels waste from the body. Stagnant bowel contents become so dry and shrunken that they fail to stimulate the urge to purge.
Relief, doctors say, lies in a new laxative principle. Old-style bulks and moisteners may create gas, take 3 or 4 days for relief. Old-style salts and drugs frequently cramp and gripe. Of all leading laxatives, only new COLONAID gives you its special 3-way relief that works only on the lower colon (area of constipation).
(1) COLONAID prevents the formation of dry, hardened waste for easy passage without pain or strain. (2) COLONAID's unique rebulking action helps retone flabby colon muscles. (3) And COLONAID acts gently on the nerve reflexes that stimulate the vital "mass movement" of your lower colon.
COLONAID relieves even chronic constipation overnight; is so gentle it was hospital proved safe even for expectant mothers. And COLONAID won't interfere with absorption of vitamins or other food nutrients. Get COLONAID today! INTRODUCTORY SIZE 43¢

It was brought out that the city has had no official coordinator with the Allegany County CD setup since the retirement of Arthur B. Gibson.

Mrs. Roeder suggested the appointment of Charles R. Nuzum, city engineer, as the official representative of the city on Civil Defense matters, and that Fire Chief Virgil A. Parker be the alternate representative. Council unanimously adopted a motion to this effect.

It also was suggested by the street commissioner that new personnel at the City Hall switchboard be given training in the city's Civil Defense procedure, and that copies of the city's setup and procedure be distributed to all departments.

Mayor Earl D. Chaney commented that most people apparently do not get "worked up" about Civil Defense, and few are aware of the city's program.

A request of the Algonquin Players was approved, permitting them to drop balloons from store windows advertising their next production, November 14-15.

In other matters, council approved the appointment of Frank P Hymes as a probationary member of the Police Department, the appointment being effective as of October 16.

The refund of $100 to each of two men, fined that amount in Police Court, was adopted after the city attorney, Hugh A. McMullen, explained the charges were dismissed following an appeal of the charges and fines.

Also adopted unanimously was a proclamation designating November 11 as Veterans Day.

Council also took favorable action on a request by the Civil Service Board that its Table of Organization be strictly followed in the various municipal departments. During pre-Council discussion it was explained that there was some laxity in departments regarding the temporary placement of employes.

Meter Receipts Up

Harry M. Whisner, meter inspector, submitted a report to the Mayor and Council yesterday that listed collections from the city's parking meters at $833.85 for the week ended October 21. The amount represented an increase of $69.40 from the previous week's report.

About 90 per cent of the nation's urban populations are said to endure air pollution.

Road Route Of Hospital Approved

A verbal agreement has been reached in connection with a solution to the route of the access roadway into the site of the new Sacred Heart Hospital on Haystack Mountain, according to William H. Geppert, attorney for the hospital.

Geppert said that after the filing of the suit by the Cumberland Real Estate Corporation, which owns a section of land over which the road traverses, numerous conferences were held with attorney for the real estate company, William Carscaden and Gorman Getty, which resulted in the settlement.

As a result of the agreement the S. T. Brotemarkle Company has started construction of the roadway. Geppert said that the real estate company objected to the height of a fill in a ravine which affected the land adjacent.

This was resolved so that the fill will be 10 feet high and not 20 feet as originally planned. Two knolls at either end of the fill will also be cut down to level off the area nearby.

The new road will run off Braddock Road at a point near the city limits and travel approximately a quarter of a mile into the hospital site atop the mountain. The grade will not exceed seven per cent and be conducive to safety to motor vehicles, Geppert said.

The Brotemarkle firm is doing the road construction for approximately $100,000.

Crisis Stand Gets Church Unit Backing

Rev. Russell E. Fink, president of the Allegany County Council of Churches, said the group has endorsed the six-point program of the National Council of Churches on the current international crisis.

The national church group expressed support for "renewed negotiations to deal with the changing issues now confronting the nations."

"We are hopeful that the Cuban people will be freed from foreign domination, and that we may all progress in political, economic and social well-being," the council announced.

Inspection Is Made For Sheep Scabies

An inspection of sheep on Allegany County farms for scabies did not turn up any infected animals, according to Joseph M. Steger, county farm agent.

Steger said that any farmer who keeps sheep and who has not been contacted can arrange to have an inspection by calling him.

Another test will be made next spring and this should decide whether an eradication program is required, Steger pointed out. The inspection here followed an outbreak of scabies in sheep flocks in other sections of Maryland.

Work Begins On Wills Creek Avenue Project

The Mayor and Council yesterday accepted the bid of Cumberland Contracting Company for improvements to Wills Creek Avenue.

The firm had submitted a bid of $19,643, and the only other offer made on the project was for $20,747 by the Hout Construction Company.

Work on the project began yesterday.

In action related to the Wills Creek Avenue project, Council authorized checks be issued to the owners of three parcels of land for purchase of easements required for the improvement work.

The checks were for $150 to Mary A. Sager; for the same amount to Charles W. and Virginia B. Sirbaugh, and for $50 to Adam R. and Virginia G. Killen.

Also authorized by council was payment of $350 to the Hout firm, the amount representing the final payment for the construction of a regulation ballfield adjacent to the city's sewage treatment plant. The ballfield contract was for $11,150.

Two firms submitted bids yesterday for installation of fencing around the ballfield. Referred to Mayor Earl D. Chaney for recommendation was a bid of $4,996 by the Regal Fence Company, and for $4,750 by the Cyclone Company.

Council accepted the "gratis" conveyance of Lots 25, 26 and 27 on Brown Avenue to the city by George F. Hazelwood Jr.

Robert C. Petersen, manager of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, extended commendation to Mrs. Lucile Roeder, street commissioner, for the new trash cans that have been placed around the city's business district. He commented that the receptacles were an improvement over the old containers.

Yesterday's meeting was opened with prayer offered by Rev. Jacob H. Snyder, pastor of Kingsley Methodist Church.

Walsh Issues Statement On Father-Son Remark

Del. William Walsh, Democratic candidate for State Senate from Allegany County, yesterday issued a statement chiding his opponent, George R. Hughes Jr., for a remark made last week about support being given him by his father, William C. Walsh.

Del. Walsh said:

In this campaign, I have made no attacks on anyone, and my only comments about my opponent, Mr. Hughes, with whom I have been friends all my life, have been directed solely at his criticisms of me. It would take too long to cover all he has said, but I do want to mention one matter.

Several days ago he stated that he faces in the election "a group of formidable opponents, namely the candidates, father and son," etc. I assume this is an effort to persuade the voters that my father is also running against him, or that there is something wrong in my father supporting me. My father, of course, is not a candidate, and the fact that I have his support seems to me to be quite natural.

I am confident that my opponent's father is giving him all the support he can, and, of course, the same thing is true of every other candidate on either ticket who is fortunate enough to have his father living.

On the other hand, if my opponent's objection to "father and son" candidates being against him refers not to my father, but to me and my son Billy, I direct his attention to the fact that Billy, who is only six years, is too young to run, and so is my other son, Jamie, who is just four months old. On the question of support, Billy has assured me that he is with me, and I am confident that Jamie is too, though he has not been able to talk to me about it, but certainly neither Billy nor Jamie poses any serious threat to my opponent in this election.

I accordingly respectfully suggest that my opponent forget about fathers and sons.

Trick Or Treat Time Change Asked

C. Glenn Watson Jr., president of the South Cumberland Business and Civic Association, yesterday asked Mayor and Council to change the day of Cumberland's Trick or Treat Night.

Watson explained that he was making the request on the basis that more people would be able to attend the South Cumberland celebration, sponsored annually by the business and civic group.

Although the pros and cons of the request were discussed, Council took no action, thereby keeping the Halloween activity on Wednesday, the time designated by action at last week's meeting. It was commented after the meeting that it was felt any change would have been too short notice for children.

Watson also invited the Mayor and Council, and chiefs of the Police and Fire departments, to participate in the Wednesday parade which highlights the celebration.

Demo Rally This Evening

A Democratic rally will be held today at 8 p. m. in Cresaptown.

The event is scheduled for Warner's Restaurant and will be known as 'Tucker Mason Night' in honor of the county commissioner, who lives in the Cresaptown area.

James Conlon, a member of the Democratic State Central Committee, will be chairman. Speakers will be Milton Gerson, attorney and campaign treasurer, and Leslie J. Clark, attorney to the county commissioners.

On Thursday a rally will be held at the LaVale Fire Hall with John J. Rowan, president of the Allegany County Board of Commissioners, as chairman.

Speakers will include John Mayo, president of District 16, United Mine Workers, and Leslie J. Clark. Various candidates will also speak.

A rally is also scheduled for Frostburg on Friday at 8 p. m. at the Legion home. Edward P. Flanigan, a member of the Democratic State Central Committee, will be chairman. Edward J. Ryan, Miller Bowen and DeSales Maher will be speakers.

Many of the candidates will probably visit the Fort Cumberland Hotel on Saturday at 1 p. m. when the United Democratic Women's Club will have a luncheon meeting.

Stops Constipation Due to "Aging Colon"
New laxative discovery re-creates 3 essentials of normal regularity
As you grow older, the internal muscles of your colon wall also age, lose the strength that propels waste from the body. Stagnant bowel contents become so dry and shrunken that they fail to stimulate the urge to purge.
Relief, doctors say, lies in a new laxative principle. Old-style bulks and moisteners may create gas, take 3 or 4 days for relief. Old-style salts and drugs frequently cramp and gripe. Of all leading laxatives, only new COLONAID gives you its special 3-way relief that works only on the lower colon (area of constipation).
(1) COLONAID prevents the formation of dry, hardened waste for easy passage without pain or strain. (2) COLONAID'S unique rebulking action helps retone flabby colon muscles. (3) And COLONAID acts gently on the nerve reflexes that stimulate the vital "mass movement" of your lower colon.
COLONAID relieves even chronic constipation overnight; is so gentle it was hospital proved safe even for expectant mothers. And COLONAID won't interfere with absorption of vitamins or other food nutrients. Get COLONAID today! INTRODUCTORY SIZE 43¢

New Wheat Market Quotas Are Outlined

Mineral County Farms Affected

KEYSER — Mineral County officials have announced that 1963 wheat marketing quotas will not apply to farmers who plant 15 acres or less of wheat for harvest in 1963 under an amendment to the Agricultural Act of 1962 signed into law Monday by President Kennedy.

This legislation, according to Secretary of Agricultur Orville L. Freeman, makes the provisions of the 1963 wheat program relating to wheat acreages of 15 or less the same as farmers voted on in the August referendum on wheat marketing quotas for the 1963 crop. It applies only to the 1963 crop. It does not change provisions relating to farms with more than 15 acres of wheat in 1963.

The new provision, like that in effect at the time of the referendum, permits a farmer who planted no wheat in the past to plant up to 15 acres in 1963 without marketing quota penalties being applied.

Farmers can get specific details for their farms from county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Offices.

Liquor-By-The-Drink Referendum Tops West Virginia Amendment List

Editor's Note: Following is the second of five dispatches on the constitutional amendments to be voted on Nov. 6, outlining the proposed changes, the debates on their merits and their legislative background.

By J. RICHARD TOREN

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— The Liquor Question — by-the-drink or by-the-bottle? — should be settled for at least the next 10 years when West Virginia voters have their say Nov. 6.

Its passing will leave a major void in the field of public issues, for it has been the source of more contention in the past 10 years than nay other question of public policy.

If the amendment is approve, of course, many resulting issues will have to be settled. Like provisions for local option elections and licensing of outlets.

But pro - amendment leaders have assured the "antis" that if the amendment is rejected by the voters, they will try their best to see that the issue is not raised in the Legislature for at least 10 years.

Pro - amendment forces, led by House members from the more free - wheeling northern counties, had not come even close to success in the Legislature despite repeated attempts starting in 1951. They made an all-out pitch in 1961 and, with the help of some vote-trading on the controversy over making Marshall college a university, got the measure through by the narrowest of margins after losing on the first House show-down.

Restrictions Are Many

The Senate, which had paid practically no attention to the issue during the preceding decade, gave its two - thirds approval with surprising ease.

As finally approved by the Legislature, the amendment contains all kinds of restrictions which most students of government say ought not be written into the state's basic legal document — where change is so difficult — but should be left to the Legislature.

But "wet" leaders contend they were forced to insert such provisions in the amendment to get it through the Legislature.

Since 1934 the Constitution has required the Legislature to "regulate the manufacture and sale" of liquor but to "forbid and penalize the consumption and the sale thereof for consumption in a saloon or other public place."

For the preceding 20 years West Virginia had operated under prohibition, while from the founding of the state until 1914 over-the-bar sale was legal. An earlier Prohibition amendment had been rejected in 1888. Under the present system, liquor may be bought legally only in state stores.

If the proposed amendment is approved, the Legislature will be allowed to provide for sale by-the-drink at licensed hotels, restaurants and clubs, race tracks, municipal or state - operated establishments, and interstate trains and planes. The general limit on licenses would be one per 1,000 population, and the law would have to provide for local option votes on both a county and municipal basis.

The law also would have to prohibit sales to persons: not seated, in saloons or bar rooms on Sundays, between midnight and noon on other days. Any sign or advertisement indicating availability of liquor would be prohibited, and 50 per cent of the revenue from excise and license taxes would have to be appropriated for support of schools.

Churches Lead Fight

Church organizations lead the fight against the amendment, providing the key personnel for the main Citizens Committee for Defeat of the Liquor Amendment. Also on record against it are the state Council of Churches, Temperance League and individual denominations including the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Seven-day Adventists.

Church opposition is not unanimous. The weekly newspaper of the Catholic Diocese of Wheeling favors it, and the Episcopal convention adopted a resolution implying that the change would be an improvement. Others on record for the amendment include the state hotel and restaurant associations, the Visitors Bureau, state AFL-CIO, Prosecuting Attorneys Association, state Jaycees executive committee and "West Virginians for Moderation."

Both the latter group and the "Citizens Committee, have worked to set up organizations down to the precinct level; have provided speakers for any group willing to listen, and have undertaken advertising campaigns.

The "Moderation" group strategy also has included a dry-up of liquor sales in many of the private clubs and other outlets—estimated to number between 750 and 1,250 — around the state. The move is largely voluntary, but has some backing from law enforcement officials.

Behind it is the idea that persons who now make use of private clubs to evade the law will get out and work for the amendment when they see what may happen if the amendment is defe9 .5

Gov. W. W. Barron, who has if the amendment is defeated.

Gov. W. W. Barron, who has taken no public stand on the amendment, said last week that defeat of the amendment "would not necessarily be a mandate" for a statewide crack-down on liquor sales.

Tomorrow: Executive Amendment.

State Teachers College Supports Curlett Report

FROSTBURG — The president and faculty of Frostburg State Teachers College endorsed the Curlett Report on Higher Education in Maryland made by the Commission for the Expansion of Public Higher Education in Maryland.

R. Bowen Hardesty, president, said his endorsement was made early this past summer and only the other day the faculty at a meeting voted its approval of the report.

The recommendations of the report which has been approved by the Legislative Council of the General Assembly offer a greater opportunity for those students interested in arts and sciences that exists today at the five state teachers colleges, Hardesty pointed out.

The endorsement of the Curlett Report by the Legislative Council by Del. William Walsh, Democratic candidate for State Senate from Allegany County, was announced Sunday and Hardesty was asked of the effect the recommendations would have on Frostburg State if it is implemented by the legislature.

The implementation of the report into law would no doubt mean considerable expansion of both the curriculum and physical plant at Frostburg, the college head said.

Hardesty pointed out that in a proposed ten year program that would meet the needs of an enrollment that would go from the present 1,313 students to 5,103 by 1972.

This would mean the construction of eight more resident halls, and three classrooms plus renovation projects and expansion of other facilities that would involve the expenditure of $14,523,400.

Under the plan advanced by the Curlett Commission, Frostburg and the five other state teachers colleges would have "teachers" dropped from their names and become full-fledged state colleges.

This would, Hardesty said today, favor the progress of graduate work leading to master of arts and master of science degrees.

"This report in no way deters Frostburg State from developing into a university. From this standpoint, I am very interested in the report and its passage into law by the General Assembly," the college president declared.

State teachers colleges are presently under the jurisdiction of the Maryland State Board of Education and only in September the board voted of its approval of the Curlett Report.

Under the new plan, the five state teachers colleges, Frostburg, Towson, Salisbury, Coppin and Bowie, plus Morgan State would be governed by a new board to be appointed by the governor.

The University of Maryland would continue to come under its own Board of Regents, while the State Board of Education would continue to have jurisdiction over the community colleges.

Over all of these would be an advisory board for higher education, comprised of nine members, with three coming from each of the three boards, the new board for state colleges, the U. of Md. Board of Regents and the State Board of Education.

New Wheat Market Quotas Are Outlined

Mineral County Farms Affected

KEYSER — Mineral County officials have announced that 1963 wheat marketing quotas will not apply to farmers who plant 15 acres or less of wheat for harvest in 1963 under an amendment to the Agricultural Act of 1962 signed into law Monday by President Kennedy.

This legislation, according to Secretary of Agricultur Orville L. Freeman, makes the provisions of the 1963 wheat program relating to wheat acreages of 15 or less the same as farmers voted on in the August referendum on wheat marketing quotas for the 1963 crop. It applies only to the 1963 crop. It does not change provisions relating to farms with more than 15 acres of wheat in 1963.

The new provision, like that in effect at the time of the referendum, permits a farmer who planted no wheat in the past to plant up to 15 acres in 1963 without marketing quota penalties being applied.

Farmers can get specific details for their farms from county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Offices.

Liquor-By-The-Drink Referendum Tops West Virginia Amendment List

Editor's Note: Following is the second of five dispatches on the constitutional amendments to be voted on Nov. 6, outlining the proposed changes, the debates on their merits and their legislative background.

By J. RICHARD TOREN

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— The Liquor Question — by-the-drink or by-the-bottle? — should be settled for at least the next 10 years when West Virginia voters have their say Nov. 6.

Its passing will leave a major void in the field of public issues, for it has been the source of more contention in the past 10 years than nay other question of public policy.

If the amendment is approve, of course, many resulting issues will have to be settled. Like provisions for local option elections and licensing of outlets.

But pro - amendment leaders have assured the "antis" that if the amendment is rejected by the voters, they will try their best to see that the issue is not raised in the Legislature for at least 10 years.

Pro - amendment forces, led by House members from the more free - wheeling northern counties, had not come even close to success in the Legislature despite repeated attempts starting in 1951. They made an all-out pitch in 1961 and, with the help of some vote-trading on the controversy over making Marshall college a university, got the measure through by the narrowest of margins after losing on the first House show-down.

Restrictions Are Many

The Senate, which had paid practically no attention to the issue during the preceding decade, gave its two - thirds approval with surprising ease.

As finally approved by the Legislature, the amendment contains all kinds of restrictions which most students of government say ought not be written into the state's basic legal document — where change is so difficult — but should be left to the Legislature.

But "wet" leaders contend they were forced to insert such provisions in the amendment to get it through the Legislature.

Since 1934 the Constitution has required the Legislature to "regulate the manufacture and sale" of liquor but to "forbid and penalize the consumption and the sale thereof for consumption in a saloon or other public place."

For the preceding 20 years West Virginia had operated under prohibition, while from the founding of the state until 1914 over-the-bar sale was legal. An earlier Prohibition amendment had been rejected in 1888. Under the present system, liquor may be bought legally only in state stores.

If the proposed amendment is approved, the Legislature will be allowed to provide for sale by-the-drink at licensed hotels, restaurants and clubs, race tracks, municipal or state - operated establishments, and interstate trains and planes. The general limit on licenses would be one per 1,000 population, and the law would have to provide for local option votes on both a county and municipal basis.

The law also would have to prohibit sales to persons: not seated, in saloons or bar rooms on Sundays, between midnight and noon on other days. Any sign or advertisement indicating availability of liquor would be prohibited, and 50 per cent of the revenue from excise and license taxes would have to be appropriated for support of schools.

Churches Lead Fight

Church organizations lead the fight against the amendment, providing the key personnel for the main Citizens Committee for Defeat of the Liquor Amendment. Also on record against it are the state Council of Churches, Temperance League and individual denominations including the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Seven-day Adventists.

Church opposition is not unanimous. The weekly newspaper of the Catholic Diocese of Wheeling favors it, and the Episcopal convention adopted a resolution implying that the change would be an improvement. Others on record for the amendment include the state hotel and restaurant associations, the Visitors Bureau, state AFL-CIO, Prosecuting Attorneys Association, state Jaycees executive committee and "West Virginians for Moderation."

Both the latter group and the "Citizens Committee, have worked to set up organizations down to the precinct level; have provided speakers for any group willing to listen, and have undertaken advertising campaigns.

The "Moderation" group strategy also has included a dry-up of liquor sales in many of the private clubs and other outlets— estimated to number between 750 and 1,250 — around the state. The move is largely voluntary, but has some backing from law enforcement officials.

Behind it is the idea that persons who now make use of private clubs to evade the law will get out and work for the amendment when they see what may happen if the amendment is defe9 5

Gov. W. W. Barron, who has if the amendment is defeated.

Gov. W. W. Barron, who has taken no public stand on the amendment, said last week that defeat of the amendment "would not necessarily be a mandate" for a statewide crack-down on liquor sales.

Tomorrow: Executive Amendment.

State Teachers College Supports Curlett Report

FROSTBURG — The president and faculty of Frostburg State Teachers College endorsed the Curlett Report on Higher Education in Maryland made by the Commission for the Expansion of Public Higher Education in Maryland.

R. Bowen Hardesty, president, said his endorsement was made early this past summer and only the other day the faculty at a meeting voted its approval of the report.

The recommendations of the report which has been approved by the Legislative Council of the General Assembly offer a greater opportunity for those students interested in arts and sciences that exists today at the five state teachers colleges, Hardesty pointed out.

The endorsement of the Curlett Report by the Legislative Council by Del. William Walsh, Democratic candidate for State Senate from Allegany County, was announced Sunday and Hardesty was asked of the effect the recommendations would have on Frostburg State if it is implemented by the legislature.

The implementation of the report into law would no doubt mean considerable expansion of both the curriculum and physical plant at Frostburg, the college head said.

Hardesty pointed out that in a proposed ten year program that would meet the needs of an enrollment that would go from the present 1,313 students to 5,103 by 1972.

This would mean the construction of eight more resident halls, and three classrooms plus renovation projects and expansion of other facilities that would involve the expenditure of $14,523,400.

Under the plan advanced by the Curlett Commission, Frostburg and the five other state teachers colleges would have "teachers" dropped from their names and become full-fledged state colleges.

This would, Hardesty said today, favor the progress of graduate work leading to master of arts and master of science degrees.

"This report in no way deters Frostburg State from developing into a university. From this standpoint, I am very interested in the report and its passage into law by the General Assembly," the college president declared.

State teachers colleges are presently under the jurisdiction of the Maryland State Board of Education and only in September the board voted of its approval of the Curlett Report.

Under the new plan, the five state teachers colleges, Frostburg, Towson, Salisbury, Coppin and Bowie, plus Morgan State would be governed by a new board to be appointed by the governor.

The University of Maryland would continue to come under its own Board of Regents, while the State Board of Education would continue to have jurisdiction over the community colleges.

Over all of these would be an advisory board for higher education, comprised of nine members, with three coming from each of the three boards, the new board for state colleges, the U. of Md. Board of Regents and the State Board of Education.

Frostburg Will Invoke Snow Ordinance

Bans Parking Over Wide Area

FROSTBURG—Donald Griffith, chief of police, announced that "Snow Ordinance 473" of the city will go into effect November 1, 12:01 a. m. and will remain in effect until the same hour April 1.

The snow ordinance forbids parking from 2 a. m. until 6 a. m. on the following streets: Main Street from east to west city limits, both sides; Broadway from Main Street to College Avenue and Water Street from First Street to College Avenue. College Avenue from Water Stret to Bowery Street will restrict parking from midnight until 6 a. m.

Chief Griffith pointed out that the purpose of the ordinance is for the benefit of the motorist and is not intended to work any hardship but to permit these streets to be cleaned or plowed open immediately following any snow storm during the winter. "It is essential that the ordinance be enforced from November 1 through April 1 even though there will be many nights when there will be no snow", he said, "This will also give the street department a chance to run the street sweeper on mild evenings to remove accumulations of ashes."

County Agent Advising Farmland Soil Testing

Joseph M. Steger, Allegany County farm agent, is encouraging farmers to have their soil tested as a means of producing a bumper crop.

He said the best way to determine the amount of lime and fertilizer needed to grow a crop on the farm is to have soil tested by the University of Maryland Soil Testing Laboratory.

Soil samples sunmitted by residents of Maryland for regular soil tests (soil texture, pH, magnesium, phosphorus and potassium) are analyzed free of charge.

A recent survey shows that Maryland farmers having their soils tested are obtaining 21 bushels more corn per acre, seven bushels more barley, five bushels more soybeans, and 1.4 tons more alfalfa hay than the average for the state.

Check with the county agent for further information on how to have soil tested.

When Bean applied the brakes the left front wheel apparently locked causing the auto to flip on its top. The auto was a total loss in the accident at 2:30 p. m., police said.

Volunteer firemen of Bowling Green were called to wash down gasoline which spilled onto the highway.

County Agent Advising Farmland Soil Testing

Joseph M. Steger, Allegany County farm agent, is encouraging farmers to have their soil tested as a means of producing a bumper crop.

He said the best way to determine the amount of lime and fertilizer needed to grow a crop on the farm is to have soil tested by the University of Maryland Soil Testing Laboratory.

Soil samples sunmitted by residents of Maryland for regular soil tests (soil texture, pH, magnesium, phosphorus and potassium) are analyzed free of charge.

A recent survey shows that Maryland farmers having their soils tested are obtaining 21 bushels more corn per acre, seven bushels more barley, five bushels more soybeans, and 1.4 tons more alfalfa hay than the average for the state.

Check with the county agent for further information on how to have soil tested.

Building Permits Are Issued Here

Two building permits have been issued by James G. Stevenson, clerk of the Allegany County Board of Commissioners.

Edward F. Lacy, Main Street, Frostburg, was issued a permit to construct a brick dwelling on Lots 56-57 on Henry Drive.

Cover Corporation, 500 Bowling Avenue, was issued a permit to construct a frame club house on Winchester Road.

Myrle C. Smith, 22, of Star Route, Flintstone, was fined $172 on four motor vehicle charges yesterday in Trials Magistrate Court and given 62 days in County Jail in default of fine.

Smith was arrested early Sunday morning on U.S. Route 220 about five miles south of the Pennsylvania-Maryland state line by State Police Trooper Richard Alderton. He was released later after payment of fine.

Driver Escapes Injury When Car Overturns

A 31-year-old local man escaped injury yesterday afternoon in a rather unusual accident at Bowling Green on U. S. Route 220 south of here.

Police said William H. Bean of 528 Woodside Avenue was driving a convertible auto north on Route 220 when he came upon an unidentified car stopped on the highway.

When Bean applied the brakes the left front wheel apparently locked causing the auto to flip on its top. The auto was a total loss in the accident at 2:30 p. m., police said.

Volunteer firemen of Bowling Green were called to wash down gasoline which spilled onto the highway.

You can't afford part-way protection!

For real protection against hospital care costs, you need Blue Cross

Nobody can predict when you will need hospital care . . . or how much that care will cost. That's why it's risky to have part-way protection . . . the kind that pays only fixed dollar allowances toward the cost of your hospital care.

Blue Cross in most cases covers the full cost of your hospital care. This is the kind of protection that takes the worry out of meeting hospital expenses.

• UNICEF And The Whisper Campaign

This is the week when scores of young hobgoblins go from door to door to solicit gifts, not for themselves, but for the millions of children all over the world who are helped each year by the United Nations Childrens Fund, better known as UNICEF.

Last year, about three million boys and girls in 11,000 communities raised $2 million during the annual Halloween week drive. Allegany and Garrett counties and adjacent sections of Mineral County raised $2,393.31. The total raised in Maryland through the trick-or-treat drive and through sale of UNICEF Christmas cards came to something over $30,000.

Unfortunately, each year some of the young trick-or-treaters have faced an unusual and distressing obstacle — some people have refused to contribute because they believed a whispering campaign to the effect that UNICEF is Communist-dominated, that it sends money to Communist countries, and that it does no real good anywhere.

The facts are these: UNICEF, like all United Nations organizations, employs citizens of member nations. Of its 575 staff members, 105 are U.S. citizens, 11 are from countries with Communist governments. Of the 163 professional and executive staff employes, 42 are U.S. citizens and seven are from nations with Communist governments. Some aid does go to countries with Communist governments, on the theory that a hungry or sick child is a child, not a political problem. Of the $30,417,000 UNICEF allocated last year, $327,400, or a little over one per cent, went to Poland and Yugoslavia. Does UNICEF do any real good? Well, in its first 15 years, 1947-1962, it helped vaccinate over 134 million children and young adults against tuberculosis, helped cure over 31 million victims of yaws, saved 11 million from blindness from trachoma and acute conjunctivitis, treated over a million cases of leprosy. Last year alone, 5.2 million children benefited from supplementary feeding programs under UNICEF.

These Days

The Quaver In His Voice

A friend of mine, a knowing man, writes to me: "The other night I heard (President Kennedy's) Cuban speech in my car — alone. I could not believe I was hearing correctly the quaver in his voice. I don't believe, had I just walked up to a radio without advance warning, I would have known it was Kennedy speaking. The oratorical flourishes, the heavy Harvard accent . . . But it was hard, as I say, to believe that here was a President of the United States talking in one of the most critical periods of our history (probably the most) and scared to death."

It just goes to show how differently men respond to the same thing. President John Kennedy, in that Cuban speech, committed his nation to the prospect of immediate nuclear war. He committed unknown numbers of human being to death. He knows, from personal experience, what death in war can do to a family. By one decision, by a few spoken words, by several signatures on documents, he gave up the immediate prospects of a negotiated peace.

What does my friend want?

Does he expect the President to do a jig? Does he expect him to put on a politician's smile? Of course, the President's voice had in it a quaver, a tremor, a supressed emotion. Of course, he was frightened by the consequences of his act.

The country responded more realistically than anyone anticipated. Practically, there is no opposition to the President's blockade of Cuba; the only criticism has been that he waited too long.

The NATO Powers have stood firmly with the United States. The Organization of American States has stood solidly behind the United States. Only U Thant, the Acting Secretary General of the United Nations, delivered a ridiculous speech which missed the point altogether, namely, that the missile bases aimed at us from Cuban soil must be completely and totally dismantled. If the Cubans wait too long, American public opinion will demand that there be no talking until Fidel and Raul Castro and their pen of Soviet stooges shall have left the country for refuge in Soviet Russia.

It is difficult for me to understand the complaint in the paragraph which I quote above. The objection seems to be that the President uses the English language well but with what has become normal speech in the Boston-Cambridge area whence he comes, a manner of speaking certainly not painful to the ear and as pleasant as that of a southern colonel. But my friend seems to feel that the President was scared to death. Not to death, but scared certainly, as any decent man would be in the face of the decision he had to make.

But President Kennedy did make his decision and it was carried forward by staff work that astounded the world. As a matter of fact, Khrushchev, with all his brilliant espionage, was caught off base and it took days to catch on to the completeness of the boycott and the certainty that if his ships attempted to run through our network of ships and planes, they would be shot down. Many of the Russian ships turned away.

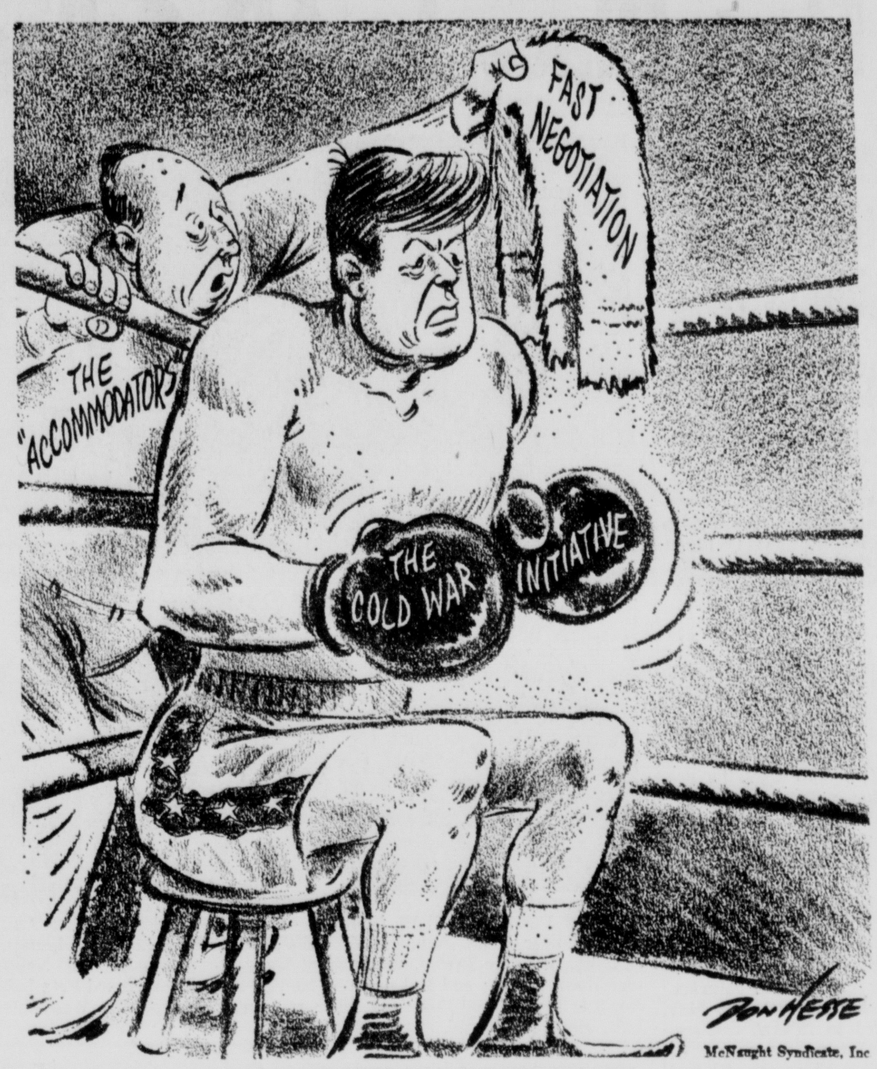

I cannot be partisan when my country is in peril. The record of our errors in Cuba is a long one. It began with our failure to spot Fidel Castro in the Bogotaza of 1948 and it has continued for many years, through many Administrations, including the Eisenhower and Kennedy Administrations.

Our major problem is to drive Russian Imperialism out of the American continents. If Khrushchev has used the Cuban episode as a diversion from our adamant position concerning Berlin, he has made a mistake. We shall defeat him in the Caribbean and we shall defeat him at the Berlin Wall of Shame. The efficiency of the first 24 hours of our blockade of Cuba ought to prove beyond doubt not only that we are ready and that we are stout of heart but that the American people are united.

Khrushchev assumed that because President Kennedy is soft-spoken and well-mannered, he is a softie. Khrushchev does not know the cold, steely anger of an Irishman when he has been lied to. We suggest that Khrushchev spend a week in South Boston and find out what he is up against. But there is no swagger; there is the humility and sorrow that is characteristic of this people.

'Hadn't We Better Throw In The Towel?'

On Rounding The Corner In The Cuban Crisis

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON

In the breathtaking Cuban crisis, one fact is already beyond dispute. Having hoped to take the United States by surprise by the rapid, clandestine installation of offensive missile bases in Cuba, the Soviets themselves were taken by surprise when the U. S. caught them at it and reacted firmly and boldly.

If the Soviets' hopes had been fulfilled, their gain would have calculating. On the cheap, with the medium and intermediate range missles which they have been producing in great quantity, the Soviets would have created the same strategic unbalance that they might have created if they had paid the heavy cost of quantity production of their earliest intercontinental missiles.

It is easy enough to see why they wanted to gain the same advantages, by this last-minute trick, which they would have gained from the famous missile gap, if they had been shrewd enough to invest in a wide range of long-range missiles when they had that opportunity. But it is not at all easy to see why they thought they could get away with this last-minute trick in Cuba.

In part, beyond much doubt, the answer to this riddle lies in the peculiar character of the Soviet Defense Ministry. Imagine a Pentagon wholly controlled by higher military officers, all of whom served until they drop. Imagine a Pentagon, furthermore, in which the scientists have almost no say, because there is no Russian Robert McNamara or Robert A. Lovett to back them up against the ruling phalanx of aging marshals and colonel-generals.

Such a Pentagon, we may be sure, would make all sorts of backwards-looking mistakes in practical military judgment. Generals who have won a great war are always, so to say, encapsulated in the epoch of their victories, unless there are rude civilians ready to break the capsule. And the Soviets have had just this kind of Pentagon since the last controlling civilian, poor old Bulganian, was forced to resign as Minister of Defense to make room for Marshal Zhukov.

Thus it is reasonable to suppose that the Soviety military planners considerably undestimated the all-seeing efficiency of modern, scientific air reconnaissance. It is pretty clear that this underestimate, if made at all, was powerfully reinforced by another underestimate of quite a differenet character.

It is pretty clear, in fact, that the Soviet military planners underestimated the strength of will of the U. S. They supposed, in other words, that even if their Cuban trick was releaved to the U. S. by air reconnaissance, the U. S. would either do nothing at all about it, or at any rate would only begin to do something about it after the upset of the nuclear balance was a safely accomplished fact. A high satellite source recently said to this reporter:

"Before this, you Americans have always been slow to act. Before you did anything, you have always had to consult so many people, and to persuade so many allies. What happened this time?"

Great caution must always be used in weighing responses from satellite sources in Washington; yet the rather plaintive question above-quoted has a convincing ring. So, too, does a query, again from Communist-bloc sources, about the basic motivation of the attempted trick in Cuba.

According to this theory, the decision to defy every Soviet precedent by emplacing offensive missiles in Cuba really originated in the dispute inside the Kremlin about the risks at Berlin. For months it has been plain that the majority of the Kremlin's military and political planners were operating on the assumption that the U. S. and its Western allies did not have the guts to defend Berlin's freedom in a crunch.

A Kremlin minority, perhaps including Nikita S. Khrushchev himself, has probably been saying, meanwhile, "Have a care! This Berlin crisis can be a very dangerous business!" If the theory already mentioned is correct, the Cuban trick was regarded by both Kremlin factions as in the nature of a preliminary test of the Berlin risks.

On the one hand, U. S. passivity in the face of the trick in Cuba would have been taken as proving the Kremlin majority's thesis about the essential flabbiness of this country. On the other hand, if the nuclear balance had been successfully upset by the trick in Cuba, the Berlin risks would have been greatly reduced. Either way, Soviet success with this Cuban trick would have led, very rapidly, to a brutal confrontation at Berlin. One may also hope that the converse will be true if all goes well. As these words are written, we are very far from having got round the Cuban corner. But if we do get round this crucial corner, every prospect will be altered, every calculation will need to be done over again. Above all, the prospects at Berlin will change, both radically and favorably.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

TOP SECRET — If you should ever get to wondering how many "classified" documents the U. S. government has, the answer is something around three billion—one for each man, woman and child living anywhere in the world. The guess was made by a government housekeeping agency, for if anyone in government has an actual figure, it, too, is probably classified.

The reason that the agency, the General Services Administration, made the guess is that it is its job to provide the metal file cabinets to hold the stuff. The agency wanted to work up some figures on what it will need in the way of spy-proof cabinets in the years ahead.

On the basis of its guess, normal replacement of the cabinets alone over the next 25 years will cost $12 million. Actually, it probably will be more because the agency didn't take into consideration a fact that every bureaucrat knows. Government papers breed other government papers, and this is even truer when it comes to classified documents, because these breed papers that even list the authorized persons who have asked to see them.

MOVING DAY—President Kennedy got a lot of mileage during his campaign by calling on the voters to "get America moving again."

The Republicans, mindful of Kennedy's present residence, have worked up a new slogan: "Let's get Kennedy moving again."

Asian Flu Epidemic Predictions Can Be Wrong

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Many health authorities talk like farmers when it comes to predicting an epidemic of influenza. Asian flu crops out in two or three year cycles. This coming winter will be the third since the last outbreak in the U.S.A. and it is natural to suspect another epidemic.

There is another clew. Last spring isolated cases of Asian flu occurred in many parts of the country. Such spring seeding, as it is called, usually is the forerunner of fall and winter outbreaks. The influenza virus goes into hibernation during warm weather and comes to life with cold, damp days.

But health authorities can be as wrong as those who forecast the weather. The epidemic may fizzle out or never get started if our population has acquired immunity through contact with the A2 virus during the two previous epidemics or via the flu vaccine. There is no simple way to determine whether immunity exists and it is safer and easier to get the vaccine than to take a chance of becoming a statistic.

In late 1957 and early 1958, the first wave of Asian flu struck a susceptible population and the number of deaths above the normal expectation increased 59,300. The second epidemic hit two years later and the excessive death toll amounted to 26,700.

Influenza is a common cause of absenteeism in industry and schools but most of the victims get well after a few days at home. Some experience fatigue thereafter and complications prolong the illness for much longer periods. Prevention is stressed because there are no specific remedies. Many industries offer the flu vaccine to their employes for this reason, giving the first dose in October or November and the second, two or three months later.

Influenza is particularly dangerous to pregnant women and persons with chronic heart, circulatory, or kidney disorders. More than 50 per cent of those who died during the previous epidemics suffered from one or more of these general ailments. Many of the victims also developed pneumonia which added to the burden of chronically diseased lungs.

RAVAGES OF WEEPING

Mrs. D. writes: What is the best and quickest way to restore the looks after weeping?

REPLY

Apply a cold wash cloth to the eyes or, better yet, smile.

BALD PATCHES

R. P. writes: My 5½ year old granddaughter has thin hair and patches with just a light fuzz. Her parents cut her hair before she was 1 year old. Could this be a cause of her poor hair?

REPLY

No, but the almost bald patches are not normal and the condition should be investigated for ringworm or other disorders.

SMOKER'S DISEASE

I. N. writes: Does Buerger's disease favor diabetics?

REPLY

No. Circulatory disorders are common in diabetics but are caused by hardening of the arteries rather than by Buerger's. The latter is a disease of young men who smoke. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on this disorder.

ABNORMAL BLOOD COUNT

W. B. writes: Is a person with a low blood count in danger of developing leukemia?

REPLY

No. I assume you mean anemia when referring to a low blood count. This is not the cause of leukemia, a condition in which there is an excessive number of white blood cells. On the other hand, the two disorders may coexist.

HEALED BONE

S. S. writes Can a person who has a cured case of osteomyelitis of the knee become active in sports?

REPLY

Yes, but he should avoid sports in which there is body contact, such as football. This bone infection tends to recur, especially after injury.

TOMORROW: Viruses in cancer cells.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

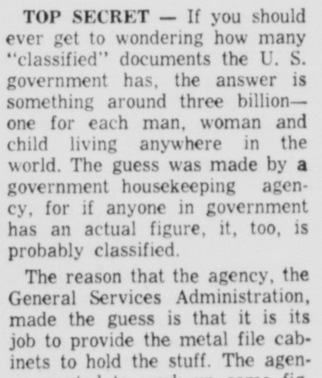

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

W. C. Fields was host one evening at his Hollywood hacienda to a group of convivials that included Robert Benchley, Roland Young, and Jack Barrymore—all past masters at the gentle art of bending an elbow. The liquor supply gave out—scant wonder—and the party decided to move on to another oasis down the road.

Fields' swimming pool lay in their path. "Let's walk across," suggested Mr. Fields. The entire gathering thereupon walked solemnly into the pool, sank like plummets, and were rescued from drowning by kindly and totally unsurprised neighbors.

Veteran raconteur Harry Hershfield tells of a dictator who ordered one of his victims to receive fifty lashes on his bare back. The victim bribed the lash-wielder to take it easy. For forty-nine strokes, the wielder stuck to his bargain, but the fiftieth stroke was so wicked that it sent the victim reeling.

The victim screamed, "You broke your bargain! Why?" The wielder told him, "I wanted you to realize what a bargain you got!"

The late Sam Hoffenstein once sent these lines to a lady love who was beginning to bore him:

"When you're away, I'm restless, lonely,
Wretched, bore, dejected; only
Here's the rub, my darling dear,
I feel the same when you are near."

Frightened Fidel Castro Rounds Up Thousands Of Cubans He Distrusts

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Underground reports from Havana claim that Fidel Castro, mockingly called "the horse" by his enemies, has been a scared horse indeed since the United States clamped its ring of steel around Cuba.

Skittish even in public, he has been seeing imaginary U. S. Marines behind every building. He alternately has promised to fight to the death and has made panicky plans to flee from the invasion he expects at any minute.

Only his most trusted aides have any idea where he can be found at a given moment. He sleeps at a different hideout every night.

Uncertain of his own people, he has also ordered a massive round-up of questionable Cubans, who are waiting out the crisis in makeshift concentration camps.

Castro was shaken by the American show of determination, which startled him as if his cigar had exploded in his face.

Apparently, he had been convinced that the United States was too frightened of Soviet might ever to threaten his Cuban domain.

He had even taunted President Kennedy about his inability to prevent the Soviet build-up, like a brat taunting a bigger boy from behind his mother's skirts.

Maverick Marxist?

Sources close to Castro describe him as a maverick Marxist, who could never submit to party discipline. Though red as a baboon's bottom, he was more interested in personal glory. His passion for political power is like that of an insanely jealous man or woman.

He refused to take orders from the professional Communists and plunged ahead with the communization of Cuba at a far more reckless pace than they advised, trying to prove he was more revoltionary than they were.

It was fear of a U. S. invasion, Havana sources say, that finally persuaded him to sell out to the Kremlin and turn Cuba into an outright Soviet bastion. The flow of Russian weapons into Cuba bolstered his confidence and gave swing to his swagger.

But President Kennedy has turned out to be more bold and belligerent than Catsro had expected. The jolting events of the past ten days have been enough to curl his beard.

Full Report From Knox

Col. William E. Knox, president of Westinghouse Electric International to whom Nikita Khrushchev gave a three-hour interview during the first day of the Cuban crisis, has now been summoned to Washington for a full report to the State Department.

The story of how Khrushchev took time out to talk things over with a representative of one of the biggest companies in the USA is considered significant.

Knox reported to the State Department that Khrushchev was calm, cordial, mild, even charming. He also seemed tired. He complained about American "piracy" and the ultimatums he had received from President Kennedy and expressed disappointment in Kennedy whom he had hoped would inaugurate new and better relations.

Knox had gone to Moscow at the suggestion of the Soviet government which indicated that it was working on a change in policy about granting licenses on new Soviet patents to friendly governments. Hitherto, the Soviet has not been willing to share its new developments, and since it has pioneered some remarkable techniques — as indicated by the cosmonauts' orbits around the earth — these could be valuable to U. S. industry.

Knox, after checking with the State Department and getting its ok, went to Moscow and conferred at length with Soviet industry leaders. He found them only in a preliminary discussion stage and advised that they join the international patents agreement if they were going to license patents. They seemed open-minded about this.

While talking with a Soviet industry official, Knox got a phone message that Khrushchev would like to see him. Knox figured it would be a five-minute meeting, but it turned out to be a three-hours-and-15-minute session.

Khrushchev was friendly and Frank, agreed that the Soviet would have to join the international patents agreement, thought there could be much more trade between the United States and Russia. He retained his ideas that the Communist system was the best, but argued that capitalism and communism could compete without war.

Note — Knox is highly regarded in the State Department as a sound judge of international economic problems and a promoter of foreign trade. He is receiving the Robert Dollar Award at the Waldorf Wednesday, from the National Foreign Trade Council for his work in promoting American exports.

Pass The Gravy

Foreign aid foe Otto Passman, who appeared dramatically on the House floor in a wheelchair to lead the debate against overseas spending, is now going overseas to spend some more of the taxpayers' money for himself.

Presumably, he intends to learn firsthand about the evils of foreign aid by helping to dispose of the taxpayers' cash himself in the glamor capitals of the world.

His broken arm has healed sufficiently for him to abandon his wheelchair in favor of more plush transportation. He has reservations next month on the champagne flights of the finest foreign airlines, perhaps to demonstrate that he isn't as fervent against foreign aid as he sometimes sounds.

He is also booked to stay in some of the world's most fashionable hotels — the Du Rhone in Geneva; Castellana Hilton, Madrid; Excelsior, Rome; Bristol, Beirut; Erawan, Bangkok; Peninsula, Hong Kong; Imperial, Tokyo.

The Louisiana congressman, whose purple oratory on government economy can bring tears to the eyes of taxpayers, may give them cause to weep again when they get the bills for all this fancy traveling and high living. The official purpose for Passman's trip is to inspect foreign aid and Peace Corps operations overseas. But unhappily, he is going to the wrong places.

Plush Investigation

To find out how foreign aid funds are spent and how the Peace Corps operates, he needs to visit the remote reaches of Africa, Asia and Latin America where there are no luxurious hotels nor glittering night clubs. He won't find a Peace Corps project anywhere near Geneva, Madrid, Rome, Beirut, Hongkong or Tokyo. Only in Bangkok will he be close enough to make a quick trip into the jungle and find one in operation.

At most of his stops, Passman won't find any foreign-aid spending either. His longest stay is scheduled in Hongkong, more famous for its exotic shops than its aid projects.

On his way home, the Congressman will make a final stop in sunny Hawaii, where he may find bathing beauties but no Peace Corps volunteers on the beach of Waikiki.

Note: In fairness to Passman, it might be said that he is not taking his wife along on his round-the-world junket. Instead, his traveling companion will be an aide, Francis Merrill, who will also travel at the taxpayers' expense.

What a wild idea, casting Rex Harrison as Professor Higgins in the screen version of "My Fair Lady"! Who do you suppose thought that one up, Mannie — Jack Warner? Next thing you know they'll be using those corn-ball tunes, "I Could Have Danced All Night," instead of some bright new stuff, "The Convent Garden Rock." I hear they're even going to stick with that tired old plot—some corny story about a flower girl who learns how to speak English.

Actually, the choice of Rex Harrison to play the role he originated and played for two years on Broadway and a year in London, and whose performance has never been matched by any of the dozen other Professor Higgineses scattered from Buenos Aires to Berlin, didn't come easy. Just about every actor who has ever spoken English, from Cary Grant to Peter O'Toole (and for all I know, Elvis Presley), had been considered for the role. The idea of using Harrison was so easy and so logical that naturally Warner Bros. fought it all the way.

They were swayed among other things by the success of Robert Preston in the movie, "The Music Man," after wowing the people on Broadway. So Warner Bros. succumbed to the inevitable and invited Mr. Harrison to be Professor Higgins in their movie. Thank God! Harrison is absolutely the only actor alive who can bring the proper withering scorn to a line like "oozing charm from every pore, oiled his way across the floor."

I dropped around the Lancaster Hotel the other day to say congratulations and ask Mr. Harrison how he fel. about being tagged for the movie.

"I'm thrilled," said Mr. Harrison, oozing contentment from every pore, "I've always wanted to do the screen version."

"You didn't always want to do the stage version," I reminded him.

"I was a bit windy about that," he admitted. (Windy: nervous, scared, from 'to get the wind up.' Thank you, Prof. Higgins.)

(It's not at all unusual for actors to be extremely windy about parts that are to become the greatest of their careers. Alec Guinness had misgivings about his role in "The Bridge on the River Kwai" and went on to win an Academy Award and knighthood. Anyhow . . .)

Harrison said he was nervous about the whole idea of putting music to Shaw and so was Shaw. Shaw had been anti-music ever since "Arms and the Man" was turned into "The Chocolate Soldier," which Shaw loathed. There were other reasons. For one thing, Harrison couldn't sing. For another, there was no script.

"When they offer an actor a play," said Mr. Harrison, "there's a script to read. But when it's a musical, they say: 'We have this bit of script and a few numbers.' The authors don't want to go any further than that until they know who's going to lead because that largely determines the kind of songs they're going to write.

"When they came to England, Lerner and Lowe, only three or four songs were written, two or three of which never got into the show. One day we were gathered around the piano, and Lerner said: 'Sing something.' I protested that I couldn't sing and Alan said that everyone could sing a little bit, so we all sang a bit of Gilbert and Sullivan. 'Pinafore,' mostly. Right there Lerner and Lowe discovered my range — two notes. So they went back and wrote all those two-note numbers like 'Why Can't the English Learn to Speak?' "

Of the role itself, Harrison says simply: I've always thought there was a lot of George Bernard Shaw himself in Professor Higgins — always fretting over the language like Shaw fretting over the alphabet. I knew Shaw and I put a lot of him in my portrayal. I mean his physical presence, his movements, his angularity."

I recall the first year "My Fair Lady" hit Broadway, listening to the presentation of the Tony awards. That year "My Fair Lady" won everything—best play, best direction, best costumes, best songs, best everything.

'Hadn't We Better Throw In The Towel?'

• UNICEF And The Whisper Campaign

This is the week when scores of young hobgoblins go from door to door to solicit gifts, not for themselves, but for the millions of children all over the world who are helped each year by the United Nations Childrens Fund, better known as UNICEF.

Last year, about three million boys and girls in 11,000 communities raised $2 million during the annual Halloween week drive. Allegany and Garrett counties and adjacent sections of Mineral County raised $2,393.31. The total raised in Maryland through the trick-or-treat drive and through sale of UNICEF Christmas cards came to something over $30,000.

Unfortunately, each year some of the young trick-or-treaters have faced an unusual and distressing obstacle — some people have refused to contribute because they believed a whispering campaign to the effect that UNICEF is Communist-dominated, that it sends money to Communist countries, and that it does no real good anywhere.

The facts are these: UNICEF, like all United Nations organizations, employs citizens of member nations. Of its 575 staff members, 105 are U.S. citizens, 11 are from countries with Communist governments. Of the 163 professional and executive staff employes, 42 are U.S. citizens and seven are from nations with Communist governments. Some aid does go to countries with Communist governments, on the theory that a hungry or sick child is a child, not a political problem. Of the $30,417,000 UNICEF allocated last year, $327,400, or a little over one per cent, went to Poland and Yugoslavia. Does UNICEF do any real good? Well, in its first 15 years, 1947-1962, it helped vaccinate over 134 million children and young adults against tuberculosis, helped cure over 31 million victims of yaws, saved 11 million from blindness from trachoma and acute conjunctivitis, treated over a million cases of leprosy. Last year alone, 5.2 million children benefited from supplementary feeding programs under UNICEF.

These Days

The Quaver In His Voice

A friend of mine, a knowing man, writes to me:

"The other night I heard (President Kennedy's) Cuban speech in my car — alone. I could not believe I was hearing correctly the quaver in his voice. I don't believe, had I just walked up to a radio without advance warning, I would have known it was Kennedy speaking. The oratorical flourishes, the heavy Harvard accent . . . But it was hard, as I say, to believe that here was a President of the United States talking in one of the most critical periods of our history (probably the most) and scared to death."

It just goes to show how differently men respond to the same thing. President John Kennedy, in that Cuban speech, committed his nation to the prospect of immediate nuclear war. He committed unknown numbers of human being to death. He knows, from personal experience, what death in war can do to a family. By one decision, by a few spoken words, by several signatures on documents, he gave up the immediate prospects of a negotiated peace.

What does my friend want?

Does he expect the President to do a jig? Does he expect him to put on a politician's smile? Of course, the President's voice had in it a quaver, a tremor, a supressed emotion. Of course, he was frightened by the consequences of his act.

The country responded more realistically than anyone anticipated. Practically, there is no opposition to the President's blockade of Cuba; the only criticism has been that he waited too long.

The NATO Powers have stood firmly with the United States. The Organization of American States has stood solidly behind the United States. Only U Thant, the Acting Secretary General of the United Nations, delivered a ridiculous speech which missed the point altogether, namely, that the missile bases aimed at us from Cuban soil must be completely and totally dismantled. If the Cubans wait too long, American public opinion will demand that there be no talking until Fidel and Raul Castro and their pen of Soviet stooges shall have left the country for refuge in Soviet Russia.

It is difficult for me to understand the complaint in the paragraph which I quote above. The objection seems to be that the President uses the English language well but with what has become normal speech in the Boston-Cambridge area whence he comes, a manner of speaking certainly not painful to the ear and as pleasant as that of a southern colonel. But my friend seems to feel that the President was scared to death. Not to death, but scared certainly, as any decent man would be in the face of the decision he had to make.

But President Kennedy did make his decision and it was carried forward by staff work that astounded the world. As a matter of fact, Khrushchev, with all his brilliant espionage, was caught off base and it took days to catch on to the completeness of the boycott and the certainty that if his ships attempted to run through our network of ships and planes, they would be shot down. Many of the Russian ships turned away.

I cannot be partisan when my country is in peril. The record of our errors in Cuba is a long one. It began with our failure to spot Fidel Castro in the Bogotaza of 1948 and it has continued for many years, through many Administrations, including the Eisenhower and Kennedy Administrations.

Our major problem is to drive Russian Imperialism out of the American continents. If Khrushchev has used the Cuban episode as a diversion from our adamant position concerning Berlin, he has made a mistake. We shall defeat him in the Caribbean and we shall defeat him at the Berlin Wall of Shame. The efficiency of the first 24 hours of our blockade of Cuba ought to prove beyond doubt not only that we are ready and that we are stout of heart but that the American people are united.

Khrushchev assumed that because President Kennedy is soft-spoken and well-mannered, he is a softie. Khrushchev does not know the cold, steely anger of an Irishman when he has been lied to. We suggest that Khrushchev spend a week in South Boston and find out what he is up against. But there is no swagger; there is the humility and sorrow that is characteristic of this people.

Frightened Fidel Castro Rounds Up Thousands Of Cubans He Distrusts

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Underground reports from Havana claim that Fidel Castro, mockingly called "the horse" by his enemies, has been a scared horse indeed since the United States clamped its ring of steel around Cuba.

Skittish even in public, he has been seeing imaginary U. S. Marines behind every building. He alternately has promised to fight to the death and has made panicky plans to flee from the invasion he expects at any minute.

Only his most trusted aides have any idea where he can be found at a given moment. He sleeps at a different hideout every night.

Uncertain of his own people, he has also ordered a massive round-up of questionable Cubans, who are waiting out the crisis in makeshift concentration camps.

Castro was shaken by the American show of determination, which startled him as if his cigar had exploded in his face.

Apparently, he had been convinced that the United States was too frightened of Soviet might ever to threaten his Cuban domain.

He had even taunted President Kennedy about his inability to prevent the Soviet build-up, like a brat taunting a bigger boy from behind his mother's skirts.

Maverick Marxist?

Sources close to Castro describe him as a maverick Marxist, who could never submit to party discipline. Though red as a baboon's bottom, he was more interested in personal glory. His passion for political power is like that of an insanely jealous man or woman.

He refused to take orders from the professional Communists and plunged ahead with the communization of Cuba at a far more reckless pace than they advised, trying to prove he was more revoltionary than they were.

It was fear of a U. S. invasion, Havana sources say, that finally persuaded him to sell out to the Kremlin and turn Cuba into an outright Soviet bastion. The flow of Russian weapons into Cuba bolstered his confidence and gave swing to his swagger.

But President Kennedy has turned out to be more bold and belligerent than Catsro had expected. The jolting events of the past ten days have been enough to curl his beard.

Full Report From Knox

Col. William E. Knox, president of Westinghouse Electric International to whom Nikita Khrushchev gave a three-hour interview during the first day of the Cuban crisis, has now been summoned to Washington for a full report to the State Department.

The story of how Khrushchev took time out to talk things over with a representative of one of the biggest companies in the USA is considered significant.

Knox reported to the State Department that Khrushchev was calm, cordial, mild, even charming. He also seemed tired. He complained about American "piracy" and the ultimatums he had received from President Kennedy and expressed disappointment in Kennedy whom he had hoped would inaugurate new and better relations.

Knox had gone to Moscow at the suggestion of the Soviet government which indicated that it was working on a change in policy about granting licenses on new Soviet patents to friendly governments. Hitherto, the Soviet has not been willing to share its new developments, and since it has pioneered some remarkable techniques — as indicated by the cosmonauts' orbits around the earth — these could be valuable to U. S. industry.

Knox, after checking with the State Department and getting its ok, went to Moscow and conferred at length with Soviet industry leaders. He found them only in a preliminary discussion stage and advised that they join the international patents agreement if they were going to license patents. They seemed open-minded about this.

While talking with a Soviet industry official, Knox got a phone message that Khrushchev would like to see him. Knox figured it would be a five-minute meeting, but it turned out to be a three-hours-and-15-minute session.

Khrushchev was friendly and Frank, agreed that the Soviet would have to join the international patents agreement, thought there could be much more trade between the United States and Russia. He retained his ideas that the Communist system was the best, but argued that capitalism and communism could compete without war.

Note — Knox is highly regarded in the State Department as a sound judge of international economic problems and a promoter of foreign trade. He is receiving the Robert Dollar Award at the Waldorf Wednesday, from the National Foreign Trade Council for his work in promoting American exports.

Pass The Gravy

Foreign aid foe Otto Passman, who appeared dramatically on the House floor in a wheelchair to lead the debate against overseas spending, is now going overseas to spend some more of the taxpayers' money for himself.

Presumably, he intends to learn firsthand about the evils of foreign aid by helping to dispose of the taxpayers' cash himself in the glamor capitals of the world.

His broken arm has healed sufficiently for him to abandon his wheelchair in favor of more plush transportation. He has reservations next month on the champagne flights of the finest foreign airlines, perhaps to demonstrate that he isn't as fervent against foreign aid as he sometimes sounds.

He is also booked to stay in some of the world's most fashionable hotels — the Du Rhone in Geneva; Castellana Hilton, Madrid; Excelsior, Rome; Bristol, Beirut; Erawan, Bangkok; Peninsula, Hong Kong; Imperial, Tokyo.

The Louisiana congressman, whose purple oratory on government economy can bring tears to the eyes of taxpayers, may give them cause to weep again when they get the bills for all this fancy traveling and high living. The official purpose for Passman's trip is to inspect foreign aid and Peace Corps operations overseas. But unhappily, he is going to the wrong places.

Plush Investigation

To find out how foreign aid funds are spent and how the Peace Corps operates, he needs to visit the remote reaches of Africa, Asia and Latin America where there are no luxurious hotels nor glittering night clubs. He won't find a Peace Corps project anywhere near Geneva, Madrid, Rome, Beirut, Hongkong or Tokyo. Only in Bangkok will he be close enough to make a quick trip into the jungle and find one in operation.

At most of his stops, Passman won't find any foreign-aid spending either. His longest stay is scheduled in Hongkong, more famous for its exotic shops than its aid projects.

On his way home, the Congressman will make a final stop in sunny Hawaii, where he may find bathing beauties but no Peace Corps volunteers on the beach of Waikiki.

Note: In fairness to Passman, it might be said that he is not taking his wife along on his round-the-world junket. Instead, his traveling companion will be an aide, Francis Merrill, who will also travel at the taxpayers' expense.

On Rounding The Corner In The Cuban Crisis

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON

In the breathtaking Cuban crisis, one fact is already beyond dispute. Having hoped to take the United States by surprise by the rapid, clandestine installation of offensive missile bases in Cuba, the Soviets themselves were taken by surprise when the U. S. caught them at it and reacted firmly and boldly.

If the Soviets' hopes had been fulfilled, their gain would have calculating. On the cheap, with the medium and intermediate range missles which they have been producing in great quantity, the Soviets would have created the same strategic unbalance that they might have created if they had paid the heavy cost of quantity production of their earliest intercontinental missiles.

It is easy enough to see why they wanted to gain the same advantages, by this last-minute trick, which they would have gained from the famous missile gap, if they had been shrewd enough to invest in a wide range of long-range missiles when they had that opportunity. But it is not at all easy to see why they thought they could get away with this last-minute trick in Cuba.

In part, beyond much doubt, the answer to this riddle lies in the peculiar character of the Soviet Defense Ministry. Imagine a Pentagon wholly controlled by higher military officers, all of whom served until they drop. Imagine a Pentagon, furthermore, in which the scientists have almost no say, because there is no Russian Robert McNamara or Robert A. Lovett to back them up against the ruling phalanx of aging marshals and colonel-generals.

Such a Pentagon, we may be sure, would make all sorts of backwards-looking mistakes in practical military judgment. Generals who have won a great war are always, so to say, encapsulated in the epoch of their victories, unless there are rude civilians ready to break the capsule. And the Soviets have had just this kind of Pentagon since the last controlling civilian, poor old Bulganian, was forced to resign as Minister of Defense to make room for Marshal Zhukov.

Thus it is reasonable to suppose that the Soviety military planners considerably undestimated the all-seeing efficiency of modern, scientific air reconnaissance. It is pretty clear that this underestimate, if made at all, was powerfully reinforced by another underestimate of quite a differenet character.

It is pretty clear, in fact, that the Soviet military planners underestimated the strength of will of the U. S. They supposed, in other words, that even if their Cuban trick was releaved to the U. S. by air reconnaissance, the U. S. would either do nothing at all about it, or at any rate would only begin to do something about it after the upset of the nuclear balance was a safely accomplished fact. A high satellite source recently said to this reporter:

"Before this, you Americans have always been slow to act. Before you did anything, you have always had to consult so many people, and to persuade so many allies. What happened this time?"

Great caution must always be used in weighing responses from satellite sources in Washington; yet the rather plaintive question above-quoted has a convincing ring. So, too, does a query, again from Communist-bloc sources, about the basic motivation of the attempted trick in Cuba.

According to this theory, the decision to defy every Soviet precedent by emplacing offensive missiles in Cuba really originated in the dispute inside the Kremlin about the risks at Berlin. For months it has been plain that the majority of the Kremlin's military and political planners were operating on the assumption that the U. S. and its Western allies did not have the guts to defend Berlin's freedom in a crunch.

A Kremlin minority, perhaps including Nikita S. Khrushchev himself, has probably been saying, meanwhile, "Have a care! This Berlin crisis can be a very dangerous business!" If the theory already mentioned is correct, the Cuban trick was regarded by both Kremlin factions as in the nature of a preliminary test of the Berlin risks.

On the one hand, U. S. passivity in the face of the trick in Cuba would have been taken as proving the Kremlin majority's thesis about the essential flabbiness of this country. On the other hand, if the nuclear balance had been successfully upset by the trick in Cuba, the Berlin risks would have been greatly reduced. Either way, Soviet success with this Cuban trick would have led, very rapidly, to a brutal confrontation at Berlin. One may also hope that the converse will be true if all goes well. As these words are written, we are very far from having got round the Cuban corner. But if we do get round this crucial corner, every prospect will be altered, every calculation will need to be done over again. Above all, the prospects at Berlin will change, both radically and favorably.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

TOP SECRET — If you should ever get to wondering how many "classified" documents the U. S. government has, the answer is something around three billion—one for each man, woman and child living anywhere in the world. The guess was made by a government housekeeping agency, for if anyone in government has an actual figure, it, too, is probably classified.

The reason that the agency, the General Services Administration, made the guess is that it is its job to provide the metal file cabinets to hold the stuff. The agency wanted to work up some figures on what it will need in the way of spy-proof cabinets in the years ahead.

On the basis of its guess, normal replacement of the cabinets alone over the next 25 years will cost $12 million. Actually, it probably will be more because the agency didn't take into consideration a fact that every bureaucrat knows. Government papers breed other government papers, and this is even truer when it comes to classified documents, because these breed papers that even list the authorized persons who have asked to see them.

MOVING DAY—President Kennedy got a lot of mileage during his campaign by calling on the voters to "get America moving again."

The Republicans, mindful of Kennedy's present residence, have worked up a new slogan: "Let's get Kennedy moving again."

Asian Flu Epidemic Predictions Can Be Wrong

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Many health authorities talk like farmers when it comes to predicting an epidemic of influenza. Asian flu crops out in two or three year cycles. This coming winter will be the third since the last outbreak in the U.S.A. and it is natural to suspect another epidemic.

There is another clew. Last spring isolated cases of Asian flu occurred in many parts of the country. Such spring seeding, as it is called, usually is the forerunner of fall and winter outbreaks. The influenza virus goes into hibernation during warm weather and comes to life with cold, damp days.

But health authorities can be as wrong as those who forecast the weather. The epidemic may fizzle out or never get started if our population has acquired immunity through contact with the A2 virus during the two previous epidemics or via the flu vaccine. There is no simple way to determine whether immunity exists and it is safer and easier to get the vaccine than to take a chance of becoming a statistic.

In late 1957 and early 1958, the first wave of Asian flu struck a susceptible population and the number of deaths above the normal expectation increased 59,300. The second epidemic hit two years later and the excessive death toll amounted to 26,700.

Influenza is a common cause of absenteeism in industry and schools but most of the victims get well after a few days at home. Some experience fatigue thereafter and complications prolong the illness for much longer periods. Prevention is stressed because there are no specific remedies. Many industries offer the flu vaccine to their employes for this reason, giving the first dose in October or November and the second, two or three months later.

Influenza is particularly dangerous to pregnant women and persons with chronic heart, circulatory, or kidney disorders. More than 50 per cent of those who died during the previous epidemics suffered from one or more of these general ailments. Many of the victims also developed pneumonia which added to the burden of chronically diseased lungs.

RAVAGES OF WEEPING

Mrs. D. writes: What is the best and quickest way to restore the looks after weeping?

REPLY

Apply a cold wash cloth to the eyes or, better yet, smile.

BALD PATCHES

R. P. writes: My 5½ year old granddaughter has thin hair and patches with just a light fuzz. Her parents cut her hair before she was 1 year old. Could this be a cause of her poor hair?

REPLY

No, but the almost bald patches are not normal and the condition should be investigated for ringworm or other disorders.

SMOKER'S DISEASE

I. N. writes: Does Buerger's disease favor diabetics?

REPLY

No. Circulatory disorders are common in diabetics but are caused by hardening of the arteries rather than by Buerger's. The latter is a disease of young men who smoke. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on this disorder.

ABNORMAL BLOOD COUNT

W. B. writes: Is a person with a low blood count in danger of developing leukemia?

REPLY

No. I assume you mean anemia when referring to a low blood count. This is not the cause of leukemia, a condition in which there is an excessive number of white blood cells. On the other hand, the two disorders may coexist.

HEALED BONE

S. S. writes Can a person who has a cured case of osteomyelitis of the knee become active in sports?

REPLY

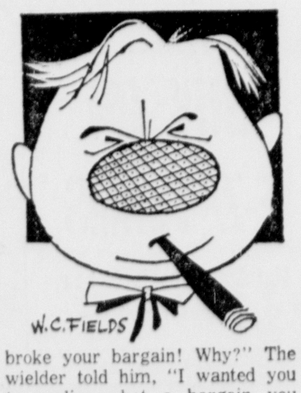

Yes, but he should avoid sports in which there is body contact, such as football. This bone infection tends to recur, especially after injury.

TOMORROW: Viruses in cancer cells.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

W. C. Fields was host one evening at his Hollywood hacienda to a group of convivials that included Robert Benchley, Roland Young, and Jack Barrymore—all past masters at the gentle art of bending an elbow. The liquor supply gave out—scant wonder—and the party decided to move on to another oasis down the road.

Fields' swimming pool lay in their path. "Let's walk across," suggested Mr. Fields. The entire gathering thereupon walked solemnly into the pool, sank like plummets, and were rescued from drowning by kindly and totally unsurprised neighbors.

Veteran raconteur Harry Hershfield tells of a dictator who ordered one of his victims to receive fifty lashes on his bare back. The victim bribed the lash-wielder to take it easy. For forty-nine strokes, the wielder stuck to his bargain, but the fiftieth stroke was so wicked that it sent the victim reeling.

The victim screamed, "You broke your bargain! Why?" The wielder told him, "I wanted you to realize what a bargain you got!"

The late Sam Hoffenstein once sent these lines to a lady love who was beginning to bore him:

"When you're away, I'm restless, lonely,
Wretched, bore, dejected; only
Here's the rub, my darling dear,
I feel the same when you are near."

Northwestern Forges Into First Place In AP College Football Poll

Alabama Holds Second Spot, USC Moves Up

Texas Falls From First To Fifth After Tying Rice

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Northwestern, a Big Ten powerhouse which has averaged better than 30 points a game in sweeping past five tough opponents, forged into a solid first place Tuesday in the national college football rankings.

The Wildcats from Evanston, Ill., who handed Notre Dame a crushing 35-6 defeat last Saturday, took a resounding lead over their chief rivals, Alabama and Southern California, in the weekly poll by The Associated Press.

Texas, No. 1 for the past two weeks, dropped to fifth after being held to a 14-14 tie by Rice.

Once - Tied LSU Fourth

Alabama, the defending national champion, clung to second place on the strength of a 35-6 triumph over Tulsa while Southern California, unbeaten pride of the Pacific Coast, moved up a notch to the No. 3 position after thumping Illinois 28-16. Once-tied Louisiana State was fourth and Texas fifth.

Rounding out the top ten were Mississippi, No. 6; Michigan State, No. 7; Arkansas, No. 8; Washington, No. 9; and Auburn, No. 10.

Auburn, with a 5-0 record, is the only newcomer in the list, which underwent a mild revision in order. The Plainsmen replaced Wisconsin, which dropped out after suffering its first loss — a 14-7 defeat at the hands of Ohio State.

Northwestern received 34 of the 52 first place votes from the special panel of sports writers and broadcasters while 15 went to the Crimson Tide. Southern Cal, Mississippi and Michigan State got one each.

Rack Up 494 Pionts

On the basis of 10 points for a first place vote, nine for second, etc., Northwestern racked up 494 points compared with 445 for Alabama and 351 for Southern Cal.

L.S.U. climbed from sixth to fourth on a 23-0 victory over Florida while Mississppi, 35-0 victor over Vanderbilt, jumped up a notch from seventh a week ago. L.S.U. and Ole Miss clash next Saturday night in Baton Rouge.

Michigan State rose three places from 10th because of its impressive 26-8 triumph over Indiana. Arkansas, which thumped Hardin-Simmons 49-7, gained one rung, leaping ahead of Washington, which was tied by Oregon 21-21. Auburn edged Clemson 17-14.

Another game involving top ten members this week sends Washington against Southern California at Los Angeles.

THE TOP TEN

	W	L	T	Pts.

Beau Purple Joins International Field

LAUREL, Md. (UPI) — The United States is expected to have its strongest field in history for the $125,000 added Washington, D.C. International with the selection of Beau Purple Monday, joining Kelso and Carry Back.

Beau Purple was clocked in 2:28 3-5 for the mile and one-half turf course in scoring his eighth success in 19 starts this year.

His victories also include the Brooklyn, Suburban and Hawthorne Gold Cup handicaps.

Army Holds Lead In Lambert Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — Army continued to hold its place as the No 1 college football team in the East Monday but felt mounting pressure from Penn State and Navy.

The Cadets, 14-0 winner over George Washington, received five of the eight first place votes in the balloting for the Lambert Trophy and led with a 9.6 average score. A score of 10 is perfect.

Penn State, 23-21 victor over California, got the other three No. 1 votes for second place with a 9.2 average. Navy, which smothered Pittsburgh in the Oyster Bowl game at Norfolk, Va., 32-9, leaped from sixth to third in the Lambert standings.

Penn State Picks Maryland Team They'd Like To Beat

Terps Have Topnotch Passer And Receiver In Shiner, Brown

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Maryland University's football Terrapins will take the best passer and the best pass receiver in the team's history into Saturday's game with Penn State, the top-ranked team in the East.

Quarterback Dick Shiner and halfback Tom Brown have already broken team records for pass completions and pass receptions, with four games remaining. Shiner's achievement, in particular, is a standout, since the junior quarterback has played his last two games with an injured back.

Coach Tom Nugent and the Maryland medical staff worked out a tail-back-for-end trade after last Saturday's 13-11 victory over South Carolina. Sophomore end Mike Funk is expected to miss the Penn State game because of a twisted knee, but sophomore tailback Joe Ambrusco has returned to the squad after recovering from the same ailment.

Maryland, who upset the Nittany Lions 21-17 last season, will face a fired-up Penn State team that voted Maryland the "team we would most like to beat" this year.

Browns 'Borrow' Quarterback From Minnesota Team

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI) — The Minnesota Vikings Monday sent rookie quarterback John Furman to Cleveland in response to an "urgent appeal" from Browns owner Paul Brown.

Vikings' general manager Bert Rose said Brown called him Monday morning and asked for Furman in a move to bolster the Cleveland quarterback spot in the absence of injured front line signal caller Jim Ninowski.

Ninowski suffered a shoulder separation and fractured collar bone in last Sunday's winning decision over Pittsburgh and will be out the rest of the season.

Rose said Furman, who was acquired from the Browns in September in one of the many deals between the two clubs, will stay with Cleveland for the balance of this season.

He has been signed to a 1963 contract and will be back with the Vikings next year, according to Rose.

Mays To Enter Hospital Today

Willie To Undergo Series Of Tests

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —Willie Mays, star center fielder for the San Francisco Giants, was scheduled to enter Mount Zion Hospital Tuesday for a series of tests.

The physical examination was slated before the season ended after Mays collapsed in Cincinnati Sept. 12 because of exhaustion.

His physician, who has asked to remain anonymous, said that the tests would be completed "within four or five days."

Mays, who complained late in the season of feeling "dead," played in 162 games this season, batting .304, hitting 49 home runs and driving in 141 tallies.

After the World Series, Willie went on a brief barnstorming tour.

the GREAT PLAY in College Football

THE UNIVERSITY of Wisconsin football team went to Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 23, 1954, as the nation's No. 1 team to meet Ohio State before 82,636 fans.

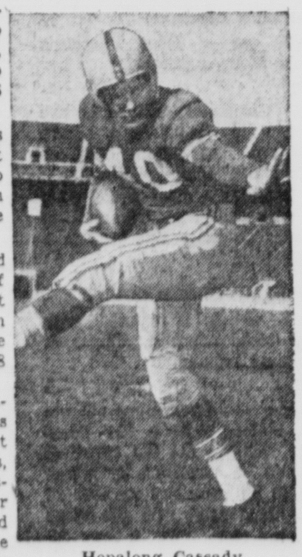

The Badgers and Buckeyes were scoreless after the first period but, following an Ohio State field goal, Wisconsin scored on a pass and led at the half, 7-3.

The third quarter provided Ohio State fans with one of their biggest thrills in recent years. The Badgers were on the move again and reached the Buckeye 12-yard line with 2:08 remaining on the clock.

At this point, Howard (Hopalong) Cassady, Ohio State's All-American, stepped in front of the quarterback's sharp pass, aimed for a touchdown. Cassady broke out from a cluster of Badgers with the ball and bolted for the sidelines. The Badger safety man had Cassady in a pocket, but Hopalong faked to his left, pulling the defender toward the chalk mark. This was all the fleet-footed, dodging Cassady needed. He headed for mid-field and out-ran all pursuers for an 88-yard touchdown run.

• • •

THIS ELECTRIFYING gallop turned what seemed a certain 10 or 11 point Wisconsin lead into a 10-7 edge for the Buckeyes. Quick to take advantage of the unexpected turn of events, Ohio State broke the game wide open with 21 points in the final period, the wedge again being applied by a Cassady run of 39 yards as the fourth quarter opened. The final score was Ohio State 31, Wisconsin 14.

Hopalong Cassady

Cassady's 88-yard run in this game led to his All-American rating and moved Ohio State into the No. 1 national weekly polls the following day. The victory also provided the impetus for the Buckeyes to move on to a championship season, a 10-0 record including a 20 to 7 victory over Southern California in the Rose Bowl.

Ohio State fans regard Cassady's run as the turning point in one of the Buckeyes' greatest seasons.

Cepeda To Have Another Exam Of Ailing Eye

Slugger Believed To Have Cataract

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Orlando Cepeda, the San Francisco Giants star first baseman who slumped after enjoying a big season in 1961, will undergo another eye examination Tuesday to determine whether he has a cataract, the ball club announced Monday.

Cepeda, who finished up the season with a .306 average then hit only .158 in the World Series, will take the examination in the office of Dr. George Campion.

The first indication that Cepeda might have a cataract came about earlier this month when he was applying for a driver's license.

William Hunter, an examiner for the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, said Cepeda failed to pass one phase of the eye test that required using the right optic alone but did pass when using both eyes.

Cepeda then told the Giants that he was informed by an eye specialist that he had a small cataract.

He was batting .352 last May and dropped to .306 at the season's end. During one month he failed to hit a home run. He had a total of 35 this year and 114 runs batted in.

Last year he paced the National League with 46 homers and 142 RBI's.

Officials Defend Middies' Use Of 'Sleeper Play'

NEW YORK (AP) — An official who worked the Oyster Bowl game last Saturday in Norfolk, Va., said Monday Navy was not guilty of violating football ethics in a trick play pulled in the 32-9 victory over Pittsburgh.

The play — an old-fashioned "sleeper" — had drawn a mild, unofficial criticism from Pitt's coach, John Michelosen.

"The play was perfectly legitimate," Irwin Weiss, the game's umpire, told a meeting of the New York Football Writers.

Early in the game, Jim Stewart, a halfback, feigned a knee injury and limped toward the sideline. The middies lined up quickly. Instead of going to the bench, Stewart shot down the field, took a pass from Roger Staubach and went for a 66-yard touchdown.

"Take a look at the code of ethics and see if it doesn't say something about a tendency to deceive," Michelosen said.

Weiss said Navy coaches had told him of the play before the game and there was no violation.

"Stewart went to the huddle and then started limping toward the sideline," the umpire added. "Navy previously had pulled a man out of the game. There were only 11 men on the field for Navy.

"My feeling is that a team must always be alert to everybody on the field."

Northwestern Forges Into First Place In AP College Football Poll

Alabama Holds Second Spot, USC Moves Up

Texas Falls From First To Fifth After Tying Rice

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Northwestern, a Big Ten powerhouse which has averaged better than 30 points a game in sweeping past five tough opponents, forged into a solid first place Tuesday in the national college football rankings.

The Wildcats from Evanston, Ill., who handed Notre Dame a crushing 35-6 defeat last Saturday, took a resounding lead over their chief rivals, Alabama and Southern California, in the weekly poll by The Associated Press.

Texas, No. 1 for the past two weeks, dropped to fifth after being held to a 14-14 tie by Rice.

Once - Tied LSU Fourth

Alabama, the defending national champion, clung to second place on the strength of a 35-6 triumph over Tulsa while Southern California, unbeaten pride of the Pacific Coast, moved up a notch to the No. 3 position after thumping Illinois 28-16. Once-tied Louisiana State was fourth and Texas fifth.

Rounding out the top ten were Mississippi, No. 6; Michigan State, No. 7; Arkansas, No. 8; Washington, No. 9; and Auburn, No. 10.

Auburn, with a 5-0 record, is the only newcomer in the list, which underwent a mild revision in order. The Plainsmen replaced Wisconsin, which dropped out after suffering its first loss — a 14-7 defeat at the hands of Ohio State.

Northwestern received 34 of the 52 first place votes from the special panel of sports writers and broadcasters while 15 went to the Crimson Tide. Southern Cal, Mississippi and Michigan State got one each.

Rack Up 494 Pionts

On the basis of 10 points for a first place vote, nine for second, etc., Northwestern racked up 494 points compared with 445 for Alabama and 351 for Southern Cal.

L.S.U. climbed from sixth to fourth on a 23-0 victory over Florida while Mississppi, 35-0 victor over Vanderbilt, jumped up a notch from seventh a week ago. L.S.U. and Ole Miss clash next Saturday night in Baton Rouge.

Michigan State rose three places from 10th because of its impressive 26-8 triumph over Indiana. Arkansas, which thumped Hardin-Simmons 49-7, gained one rung, leaping ahead of Washington, which was tied by Oregon 21-21. Auburn edged Clemson 17-14.

Another game involving top ten members this week sends Washington against Southern California at Los Angeles.

Stephens To Take Place of Burris

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (UPI)—Art Burris was relieved of duty as head football coach at W.Va. State Monday and assistant coach Bill Stephens was named to replace him.

The Yellowjackets are in the throes of a 14-game losing streak, stretching over two seasons, have two more games this season.

Burris hes been at State since 1958. Stephens is a history and social sicence instructor and volunteered to help Burris last season. He was hired officially as an assistant this year.

Dr. W. J. L. Wallce, president of the college, said Stephen's "assignment will continue beyond the end of the season for purposes of recruiting students for the program for next year and conducting the spring football practice.

Stephens said:

"Art is a very good man, and certainly quite popular with the boys, but sometimes it seems necessary to make some sort of change, right or wrong."

Burris said he would not stay on as an assistant coach but would continue as a teacher.

Keyser, Beall Clash Friday At Frostburg In Game Of The Week

Tornado To Put 11-Game Win Streak On Line

Allegany, LaSalle, Fort Hill On Road; Rebs Seek 2nd Title

Keyser and Beall will provide the fireworks in the "Game of the Week" when they tangle head-on Friday night in an important Potomac Valley Conference game at Frostburg.

Coach Frederick "Tack" Clark's Golden Tornado is at present setting the pace in the 11-school circuit with a 5-0 record while Beall is 2-0-1 and is still in the running. The other contender, Romney (4-0-1) plays a non-conference game with Farmington High School Saturday at Romney.

Last Loss To Beall

Keyser, defeated in its first start of the season, has reeled off seven wins in a row and boasts a two-year 11-game winning streak in the conference. Keyser's last defeat in the P. V. C. came at the hands of Beall (20-13) in the final game of the 1960 campaign.

Beall's only loss this season came in a non-conference game with Fort Hill and it was a close one at Frostburg, 14-7. The Mountaineers battled Romney to a 7-7 draw at Romney.

Keyser and Romney shared the P. V. C. title in 1961. Beall and Romney are the only PVC games on the Keyser schedule, Beall must face Keyser and LaSalle and Romney winds up with Keyser.

No Games Here

There will be no games at the local stadium this week with Allegany, Fort Hill and LaSalle on the road.

Allegany goes to Westminster for a C.V.A.L. game Friday and on the same night LaSalle meets Philippi (W. Va.) for the first time on the gridiron. Fort Hill invades Windber, Pa., for a Saturday night contest.

Last year's Allegany-Westminster game, staged here, was unfinished when the Owls walked off the field following a dispute over a decision in the final period with the Campers leading 20-13. Allegany was the winner via the forfeit route.

Rebs Seek 2nd Title

South Hagerstown can sew up the Cumberland Valley Athletic League title for the second straight year by beating winless North High in the Hub City Friday night. Coach Doug Cochran's Rebels will be gunning for their 9th straight win of the season, their 6th in a row in the league and their 12th straight in the 7-school circuit in two years. The Rebs were 6-0 in the loop in 1961. North High is 0-8 this season.

Mountaineer High of Thomas-Davis (7-0-2) gets an opportunity to complete its first unbeaten season when it battles Green Bank High School in Pocahontas county, W. Va., Friday afternoon.

In other Friday games, Southern's Highlanders of Oakland play at Petersburg in a P.V.C. tilt, Ridgeley (4-4) winds up its schedule at Hancock, Frederick is at Martinsburg for a C.V.A.L. game, and Bedford High's Bisons host Westmont of Johnstown.

Potomac Hosts Bobcats

Potomac State College (1-5-0) entertains the Frostburg State Teachers (3-3) at Keyser Saturday at 2 p. m., the West Virginia School for the Deaf (0-7) lowers the curtain on its season at Philadelphia with the Pennsylvania School for the Deaf and Musselman is at Westernport for a Saturday afternoon engagement with Coach Pete Ladygo's Bruce High Bulldogs. Coach Jesse Riggleman's Shepherd College Rams invade Virginia for a Saturday game with Bridgewater College.

Bunning's Large Family Warms Japanese Hearts

TOKYO (UPI) — Jim Bunning, ace pitcher of the visiting Detroit Tigers, received an ovation from spectators at a television program Monday night when he said he was the father of seven children.

Children occupy an especially important place in Japanese family life.

The 31-year-old righthander and members of the Detroit Tigers team were introduced after Norm Cash was identified by a panel on the NHK Japan Broadcasting Corporation television program "My Secret."

Minoru Murayama, pitcher of the Hanshin Tigers and who was voted the most valuable player in the Central League this year, was a guest member of the panel. He immediately described Cash as a member of the Tigers club but he was unable to give his name.

The moderator talked to Al Kaline and Dick McAuliffe, who hit a home run in Saturday's game when the Tigers routed the Daimai Orions, 12-1, in the opener of their 17-game series in Japan.

Then, the moderator came to Bunning. Replying to his question, the Tigers pitcher said he was 6-feet, 3-inches tall, was 31 years old and had seven children.

The Tigers threw baseballs to the spectators before they left.

SPORTS SPUTTERINGS

IF IT WASN'T for President Theodore Roosevelt we may never have had that very popular football weapon, the forward pass.

We sure have it today, first accented by the pros, and now reaching new heights on the college gridirons this year.

Teddy, who was a great sports fan and suffered an injury to his eye boxing, looked at a picture in a newspaper in 1905 of a battered, bloodied football player, Bob Maxwell, a 250-pound lineman for Swarthmore. The picture was snapped after Maxwell staggered off the field in a game with Penn in which the word reportedly was out to "get Maxwell" as he was Swarthmore's most outstanding player and perhaps the difference between winning and losing.

Teddy Roosevelt — Gus Dorais

When T. R. saw that picture, he was so mad that he decided football was too rough a game and issued what might be called an ultimatum that if rough play in football was not ruled out he would abolish the game.

The rules committee went to work that winter and made the forward pass legal.

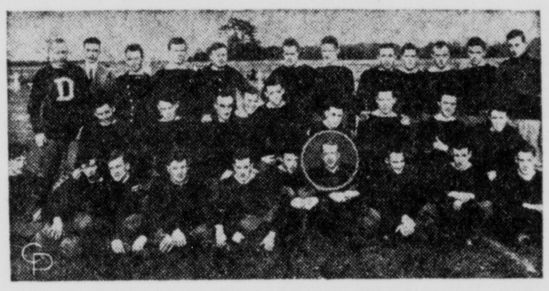

Some schools quit football and others continued to play, although the forward pass rarely was used.

• • •

THE FIRST PASS, according to our grid historians, was thrown in the 1906 season by a Wesleyan team against Yale, but Yale won by a big score, anyhow. But, in the same season, Yale reportedly threw a pass against Harvard and it resulted in a touchdown and a 6-0 win for the Bulldogs.

• • •

THE FIRST noticeable and successful use of the forward pass came in 1913 when Notre Dame, a small school in the midwest, was asked to meet Army in the East as a soft touch for an open date on the Army schedule.

Rockne (circled) with Notre Dame team of 50 years ago.

Notre Dame accepted and went East. Army scored two touchdowns quickly and it was 13-0.

Gus Dorais, the Notre Dame quarterback, and Knute Rockne, end, had spent the summer of 1913 at Cedar Point, O., and practiced the forward pass, with Gus throwing and Knute catching.

So, they were ready and decided the only way to score on Army would be by the forward pass. With Knute one of his chief targets and another end also receiving the ball, Notre Dame baffled the Army with its aerial magic and when the game ended the score read Notre Dame 35, Army 13.

The forward pass was proven to be one way for a little team to compete against a team of big linemen and it's been used more and more over the years.

• • •

RIGHT NOW there is a new aerial accent in college football and new records for completions are being chalked up. Latest NCAA figures reveal that 39.5 per cent of all yards gained this year have been by passes.

Fort Hill Wins Sixth Straight Jayvee Contest

Sewell Hurt In 20-12 Triumph Over Keyser

Fort Hill High School's undefeated junior varsity football team posted its sixth victory of the season over Keyser High Jayvees yesterday at the stadium by the score of 20-12 but lost the services of quarterback Donnie Sewell, who suffered a fractured left ankle.

Sewell was holding the ball for the point-after-touchdown try and was injured when a Keyser player barged into him and knocked him down. Donnie was removed to Memorial Hospital.

Jimmie Mertens accounted for two of Fort Hill's touchdowns. In the first period he ran seven yards for the initial six-pointer and scored again in the third stanza on a 26-yard gallop. Eddie Abbott went over from the two for the Little Sentinels' other score in the second quarter.

"Rip" Flick kicked the extra points after the first and second tds.

Sears and Rogers scored the Keyser touchdowns in the final period. Keyser recovered a Fort Hill fumble to drive for its second score.

Fort Hill swept the season series with Keyser, winning the first game, 13-6.

Coach John Frank's gridders conclude their schedule with undefeated Allegany Monday, November 12, at 2 p.m., at the stadium.

NCAA Submits Four New Steps To 591 Members

Makes Latest Move In Hassle With AAU

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Collegiate Athletic Association has recommended four new steps to its full membership in its continuing struggle with the Amateur Athletic Union, Executive Director Walter Byers disclosed Monday night.

The recommendations:

1. Withdrawal by member colleges from AAU membership until the AAU indicates a cooperative attitude toward the new sports federations created in the NCAA-AAU war.

2. A boycott on entering college athletes or teams in AAU competition unless the event is sanctioned by the appropriate federation.

3. Resignation of college personnel from AAU committees in the sports in which federations have been created — basketball gymnastics and track and field.

4. That college facilities and equipment be utilized to "the maximum to further federation activities."

The recommendations were included, Byers revealed, in a statement of NCAA policy which was mailed to its 591-member institutions last Wednesday.

It amounts to the latest step in the AAU-NCAA hassle, now more than 2½ years old, over control of amateur sports, particularly involving international events such as the Olympics.

The 5,000-mile trans - Canada Highway serves about 90 per cent of Canada's population.

MESSENGER SERVICE—In a recent game, Bill Swingle, Northwestern fullback, was wired for sound but the gadget had nothing to do with transmitting signals from the coach. It was a triaxial accelerometer and Bill's running, tackling, battering and driving were transmitting data to researchers atop the stadium. The idea is to help devise better protective equipment, especially helmets, for football players.

Young Kratz Wins Laurel's Feature Race

Scores Victory In Civic Center Purse

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 29 (AP)—Freddy W. Kratz, 16-year-old apprentice jockey, drove Bix to victory in the featured Civic Center Purse at Laurel Race Course today and scored his first triumph on a major Maryland track.

Bix, a 3-year-old owned by Mrs. Dorothea S. Foote, appeared to tire at the sixteenth pole, but Kratz whipped Bix to a one length victory over Mrs. Violet Stewart's War League. Prince De Fer, the leader out of the gate, finished a length and a quarter behind war league.

Bix returned $4.20 after going off the favorite in the eight-horse field. He covered the six furlongs in 1 minute, 12 3/5 seconds.

The second program of Laurel's 12-day meeting attracted 9,520 fans who bet $806,805 on the nine-race card. Apprentice Ronnie Ferraro, who opened with four winners Saturday, added two more today. He ranks second to Willie Shoemaker in the national jockey standings.

Tomorrow will be a dark day at Laurel. Another is scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 3, enabling the track to conclude its brief session with the Washington, D. C., international on Nov. 12.

Alleged Fixer Of Cage Games Goes On Trial

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Molinas went on trial Monday as the pivot man in the nationwide basketball fix scandal.

Selection of a jury began for the trial of Molinas, who played for Columbia University in the early 1950's and later for the old Fort Wayne Pistons before he was banned by the NBA for betting on his own team.

Molinas is accused of attempting to fix 25 games. His alleged machinations were said to have involved 12 schools and 22 players. There are 11 co-conspirators listed in the indictment against him charging conspiracy, and in addition he faces charges of bribery and subornation of perjury.

Assistant District Attorney Peter Andreoli told state Supreme Court Justice Joseph A. Sarafite that it would take about a month for the trial of the complex case against the 30-year old former basketball star, who now is a practicing attorney.

Palmer Remains Top Money Winner

DUNEDIN, Fla. (UPI) —Runner-up Gene Littler edged only a tiny step closer to front-running Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., Monday in official money winnings on this year's Professional Golfers Association tour.

Littler earned $1,000 for finishing in a tie for sixth Sunday in the Orange County open tournament at Costa Mesa, Calif., and pushed his total on the unofficial standings to $66,200.83. Palmer, who did not compete at Costa Mesa, remains well out front with $81,448.33.

Third on the ranking was Billy Casper with $61,842.19 and fourth U. S. Open champion Jack Nicklaus with $61,318.95, but this total does not include the $50,000 Nicklaus won by defeating Palmer and Gary Player in the "world series" match which was classed as an exhibition.

Misty Day Wins Sport Page 'Cap

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP) — David Shaer's Misty Day came off the pace to win the 10th running of the $24,200 Sport Page Handicap as the New York Racing Association launched a 30-day meeting at Aqueduct Race Track today.

The 4-year-old son of Nasrullah-Grey Flight, ridden by William Boland, stepped the six furlongs in the excellent time of 1:10 4/5 to score by a length over Charles W. Engelhard's Nassau Hall, the favorite, who beat Emil Dolce's Surfer by a length and a half and a half for the place.

Circle Farm's Be On Time set a hot pace until the top of the stretch with John J. Roe's Tilmar and Surfer in close pursuit.

Nassau Hall assumed command in mid-stretch and looked like a winner until Misty Day uncorked a stretch drive that swept him to victory.

Cats, cattle, swine and horses, as well as dogs, have been known to suffer from rabies.

Pender-Torres Bout Postponed Until Nov. 15

BOSTON (UPI) — Paul Pender's defense of the Massachusetts, New York and European version of the world middleweight title was postponed Monday until Nov. 15 because of the illness of his opponent, Jose Torres of Puerto Rico.

Promoter Sam Silverman said he postponed the 15-round bout scheduled for Friday night at Boston Garden at Torres' request. Torres came down with a heavy cold last week and had been unable to continue intensive training, Silverman said.

Silverman rescheduled the fight to Nov. 15 to coincide with a closed circuit telecast of the Archie Moore-Cassius Clay heavyweight bout from San Francisco. Silverman originally had planned to have the telecast follow a card of preliminaries but now has combined the title fights.

Pender, a former Brookline fireman, still will get the $100,000 guarantee assured him by Torres and his manager, Cus D'Amato, Silverman said.

Pender, in training at North Falmouth, Mass., was reported to be disappointed by the delay. He will continue to train on Cape Cod, it was reported.

WVU Halfback's Hand Not Broken

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (UPI)—Coach Gene Corum said Monday that X-rays of West Virginia halfback Tom Yeater's hand showed it was not fractured as had earlier been feared.

Yeater was injured in the Mountaineers' 51-22 loss to Oregon State at Portland Saturday. The hand is badly bruised and it will not be known until later in the week if the sophomore back will be able to play against William & Mary.

Corum put the team through a light workout Monday.

Motorists Take 3-0 Lead Over Bowmen For Deer Season

Motorists are leading the hunters by the score of 3-0 since the archery season for deer opened Friday, according to Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden.

No deer have been reported slain by the bowmen during the first three days of the season which ends Nov. 14 but State Police report that motorists have bagged three deer in Allegany county since last Friday.

Minke recalled that a year ago the bowmen drew a blank for several days and then found the range and wound up with a record 27 for the season.

There are an estimated 25,500,000 cats in the United States, and 23.9 per cent of all American families are said to own one or more cats.

Teddy Roosevelt — Gus Dorais

and perhaps the difference between winning and losing.

When T. R. saw that picture, he was so mad that he decided football was too rough a game and issued what might be called an ultimatum that if rough play in football was not ruled out he would abolish the game.

The rules committee went to work that winter and made the forward pass legal.

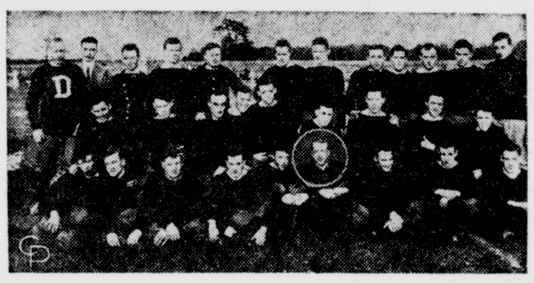

Some schools quit football and others continued to play, although the forward pass rarely was used.

• • •

THE FIRST PASS, according to our grid historians, was thrown in the 1906 season by a Wesleyan team against Yale, but Yale won by a big score, anyhow. But, in the same season, Yale reportedly threw a pass against Harvard and it resulted in a touchdown and a 6-0 win for the Bulldogs.

• • •

THE FIRST noticeable and successful use of the forward pass came in 1913 when Notre Dame, a small school in the midwest, was asked to meet Army in the East as a soft touch for an open date on the Army schedule.

Rockne (circled) with Notre Dame team of 50 years ago.

Notre Dame accepted and went East. Army scored two touchdowns quickly and it was 13-0.

Gus Dorais, the Notre Dame quarterback, and Knute Rockne, end, had spent the summer of 1913 at Cedar Point, O., and practiced the forward pass, with Gus throwing and Knute catching.

So, they were ready and decided the only way to score on Army would be by the forward pass. With Knute one of his chief targets and another end also receiving the ball, Notre Dame baffled the Army with its aerial magic and when the game ended the score read Notre Dame 35, Army 13.

The forward pass was proven to be one way for a little team to compete against a team of big linemen and it's been used more and more over the years.

• • •

RIGHT NOW there is a new aerial accent in college football and new records for completions are being chalked up. Latest NCAA figures reveal that 39.5 per cent of all yards gained this year have been by passes.

Fort Hill Wins Sixth Straight Jayvee Contest

Sewell Hurt In 20-12 Triumph Over Keyser

Fort Hill High School's undefeated junior varsity football team posted its sixth victory of the season over Keyser High Jayvees yesterday at the stadium by the score of 20-12 but lost the services of quarterback Donnie Sewell, who suffered a fractured left ankle.

Sewell was holding the ball for the point-after-touchdown try and was injured when a Keyser player barged into him and knocked him down. Donnie was removed to Memorial Hospital.

Jimmie Mertens accounted for two of Fort Hill's touchdowns. In the first period he ran seven yards for the initial six-pointer and scored again in the third stanza on a 26-yard gallop. Eddie Abbott went over from the two for the Little Sentinels' other score in the second quarter.

"Rip" Flick kicked the extra points after the first and second tds.

Sears and Rogers scored the Keyser touchdowns in the final period. Keyser recovered a Fort Hill fumble to drive for its second score.

Fort Hill swept the season series with Keyser, winning the first game, 13-6.

Makes Latest Move In Hassle With AAU

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Collegiate Athletic Association has recommended four new steps to its full membership in its continuing struggle with the Amateur Athletic Union, Executive Director Walter Byers disclosed Monday night.

The recommendations:

1. Withdrawal by member colleges from AAU membership until the AAU indicates a cooperative attitude toward the new sports federations created in the NCAA-AAU war.

2. A boycott on entering college athletes or teams in AAU competition unless the event is sanctioned by the appropriate federation.

3. Resignation of college personnel from AAU committees in the sports in which federations have been created — basketball gymnastics and track and field.

4. That college facilities and equipment be utilized to "the maximum to further federation activities."

The recommendations were included, Byers revealed, in a statement of NCAA policy which was mailed to its 591-member institutions last Wednesday.

It amounts to the latest step in the AAU-NCAA hassle, now more than 2½ years old, over control of amateur sports, particularly involving international events such as the Olympics.

The 5,000-mile trans - Canada Highway serves about 90 per cent of Canada's population.

MESSENGER SERVICE—In a recent game, Bill Swingle, Northwestern fullback, was wired for sound but the gadget had nothing to do with transmitting signals from the coach. It was a triaxial accelerometer and Bill's running, tackling, battering and driving were transmitting data to researchers atop the stadium. The idea is to help devise better protective equipment, especially helmets, for football players.

Misty Day Wins Sport Page 'Cap

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP) — David Shaer's Misty Day came off the pace to win the 10th running of the $24,200 Sport Page Handicap as the New York Racing Association launched a 30-day meeting at Aqueduct Race Track today.

The 4-year-old son of Nasrullah-Grey Flight, ridden by William Boland, stepped the six furlongs in the excellent time of 1:10 4/5 to score by a length over Charles W. Engelhard's Nassau Hall, the favorite, who beat Emil Dolce's Surfer by a length and a half and a half for the place.

Circle Farm's Be On Time set a hot pace until the top of the stretch with John J. Roe's Tilmar and Surfer in close pursuit.

Nassau Hall assumed command in mid-stretch and looked like a winner until Misty Day uncorked a stretch drive that swept him to victory.

Cats, cattle, swine and horses, as well as dogs, have been known to suffer from rabies.

Young Kratz Wins Laurel's Feature Race

Scores Victory In Civic Center Purse

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 29 (AP)—Freddy W. Kratz, 16-year-old apprentice jockey, drove Bix to victory in the featured Civic Center Purse at Laurel Race Course today and scored his first triumph on a major Maryland track.

Bix, a 3-year-old owned by Mrs. Dorothea S. Foote, appeared to tire at the sixteenth pole, but Kratz whipped Bix to a one length victory over Mrs. Violet Stewart's War League. Prince De Fer, the leader out of the gate, finished a length and a quarter behind war league.

Bix returned $4.20 after going off the favorite in the eight-horse field. He covered the six furlongs in 1 minute, 12 3/5 seconds.

The second program of Laurel's 12-day meeting attracted 9,520 fans who bet $806,805 on the nine-race card. Apprentice Ronnie Ferraro, who opened with four winners Saturday, added two more today. He ranks second to Willie Shoemaker in the national jockey standings.

Tomorrow will be a dark day at Laurel. Another is scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 3, enabling the track to conclude its brief session with the Washington, D. C., international on Nov. 12.

Alleged Fixer Of Cage Games Goes On Trial

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Molinas went on trial Monday as the pivot man in the nationwide basketball fix scandal.

Selection of a jury began for the trial of Molinas, who played for Columbia University in the early 1950's and later for the old Fort Wayne Pistons before he was banned by the NBA for betting on his own team.

Molinas is accused of attempting to fix 25 games. His alleged machinations were said to have involved 12 schools and 22 players. There are 11 co-conspirators listed in the indictment against him charging conspiracy, and in addition he faces charges of bribery and subornation of perjury.

Assistant District Attorney Peter Andreoli told state Supreme Court Justice Joseph A. Sarafite that it would take about a month for the trial of the complex case against the 30-year old former basketball star, who now is a practicing attorney.

Palmer Remains Top Money Winner

DUNEDIN, Fla. (UPI) —Runner-up Gene Littler edged only a tiny step closer to front-running Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., Monday in official money winnings on this year's Professional Golfers Association tour.

Littler earned $1,000 for finishing in a tie for sixth Sunday in the Orange County open tournament at Costa Mesa, Calif., and pushed his total on the unofficial standings to $66,200.83. Palmer, who did not compete at Costa Mesa, remains well out front with $81,448.33.

Third on the ranking was Billy Casper with $61,842.19 and fourth U. S. Open champion Jack Nicklaus with $61,318.95, but this total does not include the $50,000 Nicklaus won by defeating Palmer and Gary Player in the "world series" match which was classed as an exhibition.

Pender-Torres Bout Postponed Until Nov. 15

BOSTON (UPI) — Paul Pender's defense of the Massachusetts, New York and European version of the world middleweight title was postponed Monday until Nov. 15 because of the illness of his opponent, Jose Torres of Puerto Rico.

Promoter Sam Silverman said he postponed the 15-round bout scheduled for Friday night at Boston Garden at Torres' request. Torres came down with a heavy cold last week and had been unable to continue intensive training, Silverman said.

Silverman rescheduled the fight to Nov. 15 to coincide with a closed circuit telecast of the Archie Moore-Cassius Clay heavyweight bout from San Francisco. Silverman originally had planned to have the telecast follow a card of preliminaries but now has combined the title fights.

Pender, a former Brookline fireman, still will get the $100,000 guarantee assured him by Torres and his manager, Cus D'Amato, Silverman said.

Pender, in training at North Falmouth, Mass., was reported to be disappointed by the delay. He will continue to train on Cape Cod, it was reported.

Motorists Take 3-0 Lead Over Bowmen For Deer Season

Motorists are leading the hunters by the score of 3-0 since the archery season for deer opened Friday, according to Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden.

No deer have been reported slain by the bowmen during the first three days of the season which ends Nov. 14 but State Police report that motorists have bagged three deer in Allegany county since last Friday.

Minke recalled that a year ago the bowmen drew a blank for several days and then found the range and wound up with a record 27 for the season.

There are an estimated 25,500,000 cats in the United States, and 23.9 per cent of all American families are said to own one or more cats.

Sigler Is Named For Pan-American Soccer Tryouts

Roy Sigler, Frostburg State Teachers College All-Southern and All-American soccer player, has been selected to participate in the Pan-American tryouts to be held November 17, at Baltimore, it was announced yesterday by Kenneth Babcock, soccer mentor of the Bobcats.

Sigler is among six players from the Washington area named to participate in the games from which two teams will be chosen to play in a series of contests at Brooklyn College, Brooklyn, N. Y., December 1-2.

A squad of 18 players will be chosen at Brooklyn for the East-West finals at St. Louis.

The Pan-American games will be staged at Sao Paulo, Brazil in 1963.

Sigler, of Middletown, Md., was graduated from Frostburg State Teachers College in June and is now teaching near Frederick, Md. He played a right wing position on Frostburg State teams, made the All-Southern team four years and earned All-American mention in his senor year.

Bunning's Large Family Warms Japanese Hearts

TOKYO (UPI) — Jim Bunning, ace pitcher of the visiting Detroit Tigers, received an ovation from spectators at a television program Monday night when he said he was the father of seven children.

Children occupy an especially important place in Japanese family life.

The 31-year-old righthander and members of the Detroit Tigers team were introduced after Norm Cash was identified by a panel on the NHK Japan Broadcasting Corporation television program "My Secret."

Minoru Murayama, pitcher of the Hanshin Tigers and who was voted the most valuable player in the Central League this year, was a guest member of the panel. He immediately described Cash as a member of the Tigers club but he was unable to give his name.

The moderator talked to Al Kaline and Dick McAuliffe, who hit a home run in Saturday's game when the Tigers routed the Daimai Orions, 12-1, in the opener of their 17-game series in Japan.

Then, the moderator came to Bunning. Replying to his question, the Tigers pitcher said he was 6-feet, 3-inches tall, was 31 years old and had seven children.

The Tigers threw baseballs to the spectators before they left.

WVU Halfback's Hand Not Broken

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (UPI)—Coach Gene Corum said Monday that X-rays of West Virginia halfback Tom Yeater's hand showed it was not fractured as had earlier been feared.

Yeater was injured in the Mountaineers' 51-22 loss to Oregon State at Portland Saturday. The hand is badly bruised and it will not be known until later in the week if the sophomore back will be able to play against William & Mary.

Corum put the team through a light workout Monday.

St. Patrick's-St. Mary's Game Time Is Changed

The important Catholic Youth Football League game Sunday between St. Patrick's and St. Mary's at Mt. Calvary will be staged at 4 p.m., instead of 2 p.m., according to Coach Ronald Ingram of the Gaels.

St. Patrick's scored an 18-6 win over the Gaels earlier in the season but St. Mary's, after losing four in a row, exploded last Sunday and crushed St. Michael's, 45-20.

If St. Patrick's wins and SS. Peter & Paul defeats Frostburg Sunday the race will end in a tie.

REJOINS CARDINALS — Baseball's grand old man rejoined the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday after a separation of 20 years. Rich Rollins Named AL's Sophomore Of The Year

Floyd Robinson Second; Pair Ties For Third

NEW YORK (AP) — Rich Rollins, the young third baseman whose unexpected power hitting helped the Minnesota Twins finish second in the American League race, was named the circuit's sophomore-of-the-year Monday in the annual Associated Press poll.

Rollins collected 49 votes in the balloting by members of the Baseball Writers' Association. Outfielder Floyd Robinson of the Chicago White Sox was next with 34, followed by outfielders Chuck Hinton of Washington and Carl Yastrzemski, Boston, 7 each; Leroy Thomas of Los Angeles, another outfielder, 6, and pitcher Claude Osteen, Washington, 3. A total of 106 writers participated in the voting.

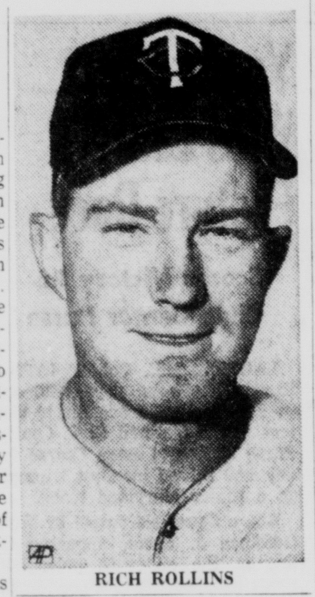

Rollins played in only 13 games for the Twins in 1961. However, he spent more than 45 days in the majors and thus does not qualify for this year's rookie award.

With a splendid showing in spring training, Rollins beat out four other candidates for a regular job. And, in 159 games the past season, he batted .298, walloped 16 homers and drove in 96 runs. He was among the batting leaders during most of the campaign, but slumped in the final month.

Robinson, an outstanding freshman in 1961 when he hit .310 with 11 homers and 59 RBI, surpassed that performance this year. He finished with a .312 average, 11 homers and 109 runs batted in. Robinson's batting mark was the third highest in the AL.

Hinton wound up fourth in the batting competition with .310. He also produced 17 homers, 75 RBI and stole 28 bases. In 1961 the fleet outfielder batted .260 in 106 games, hit 6 homers and collected 34 RBI.

Yastrzemski, a highly-touted rookie in '61, had a .296 average the past season. He batted only .266 the previous year. Thomas finished at .290 with 26 homers and 104 RBI. Osteen posted an 8-13 record with two shutouts and a 3.66 earned run average for the last-place Senators.

Evashevski Puts Rap On Big Ten Effigy Hangers

Iowa AD Terms Culprits Cowards

CHICAGO (AP)—Effigy hangers were blasted as cowards Monday by Forest Evashevski, Iowa Athletic director.

Evashevski, apparently referring to football coaches Jerry Burns of Iowa and Bump Elliott of Michigan, told Chicago's American quarterback club:

"I've had two good friends hanged in effigy. I resent some coward who hides behind obscurity and hangs someone in effigy.

"These idotic hangings should be treated the same as anonymous letters to the editor and thrown out.

"People who pay $5 to see a football game have a right to criticize. But if a coach is to be handed in effigy, let the person doing it be known. Otherwise, I see no reason to give it publicity—it is the work of cowards.

"My friends who were hanged in effigy have children. Such acts certainly are unfair to the family. I have a son (Frosty) who is a quarterback at Michigan. I am glad he is playing for such a coach as Bump Elliott, who will never sacrifice a conviction to win a ball game.

"Another thing I resent," Evashevski continued, "are comments of wags that the Big Ten is becoming a second rate conference because of high academic requirements. It did not become great because of football players, but rather because it is made up of 10 great institutions. I have no fear the conference ever will lose its dominance. This time could only come if scholastic standards were lowered.

"I see nothing worse than a university lowering its academic standards to build an athletic program."

Branch Rickey Rejoins Card Organization

Returns To Club After 20 Years

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Branch Rickey rejoined the St. Louis Cardinals Monday after a separation of 20 years and announced it would take a miracle for the Cards to win the pennant next year.

The bushy-browed, 80-year-old Rickey sat in his Busch Stadium office and said his new job was the production and development of players. Near him sat the big names in the Card organization—President August A. Busch Jr., General Manager Bing Devine, and Executive Vice President Dick Meyer.

"This club can't be traded into a pennant," Rickey said. "There aren't that many players around for trade. The players have got to be developed."

When told that a new baseball stadium is scheduled for completion in St. Louis in 1964, Rickey said, "It would be a great thing if the team could be a contender by then."

"I'm anxious for the team to win a pennant," he added, and 1965 seems to be a "rational objective for a pennant."

Rickey, who said he looks upon St. Louis as home, said he was happy to return to the Cardinals, for whom he worked as field manager, business manager and vice president from 1917 until 1942.

Two of Rickey's most noteworthy contributions to baseball were the development of the farm system and the bringing of Negroes into the major leagues.

With a heavy wooden cane resting near one hand, and a big cigar held in his other, Rickey spoke strongly against the payment of bonuses to young players.

And he predicted the eventual formation of a third major league.

The Mahatma, as he was known with the Brooklyn Dodgers, spent 26 years with the Cardinals and helped develop players who won nine pennants and six world championships between 1926 and 1946. Then he went to Brooklyn, where his teams won two pennants in eight years.

Rickey left the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1955 and recently was president of the Continental League, a proposed third major circuit. The league never made it—but it forced the two major leagues to expand from eight clubs to ten.

Angels Obtain Bob Turley

Yankees Get Rid Of Former Star

NEW YORK (AP)—Bob Turley, the majors' outstanding pitcher four years ago, was shipped to the Los Angeles Angels by the world champion New York Yankees Monday.

The deal was conditional. General Manager Roy Hamey of the Yankees said that the Angels will give the Yankees a mutually satisfactory player by opening day, 1963 if Turley is retained by Los Angeles. The veteran right-hander developed bone chips early in the 1961 campaign and has worked infrequently since then. He underwent elbow surgery last fall.

Turley, who pitched only one complete game in the past two seasons, had a 3-3 record in 1962. He also won three games in 1961.

He is currently player-manager of the San Juan club in the Puerto Rican Winter League. In his most recent effort, Turley was shelled from the mound in the third inning as Santurce defeated San Juan 6-1 Sunday night.

Turley was the ace of the Yankee pitching staff in 1958 when he won 21 games and was named winner of the Cy Young Award as the best pitcher in the big leagues. He also paced the club's World Series triumph that year winning two games and saving another in relief as New York edged the Milwaukee Braves, four games to three.

In 10 big league campaigns, Turley has won 98 games and lost 74. He is a native of East St. Louis, Ill. and lives in Lutherville, Md., just outside of Baltimore.

Keith Price booted Beall High School into first place in the W.M.I. Soccer League when he scored a field goal in the second period to give Coach "Ebbie" Finzel's Mountaineers a 1-0 decision over Mt. Savage High School yesterday at Frostburg.

The win gave Beall a 4-0-2 record and 10 points, one more than Valley High School.

Price Leads Scorers

Price took over the individual scoring leadership of the league by registering his seventh goal of the season. Marvin Miller, of Valley, is the runner-up with six tallies.

Goalie Charles Gray, Bill Diehl, Dennis Bartlett and Price were Beall's outstanding players while Bill Johnson, Robert Robertson and Darrell Blank were Mt. Savage's standouts.

The win gave Beall a sweep of the series, the score of the first game being 2-0.

Two Games Today

Valley plays at Flintstone and Bruce visits Mt. Savage for league games today. The Black Knights can take over sole possession of first place by winning today's game or a tie would knot Coach John C. Meyers' team with the Mountaineers.

Bob Kirk and John Fatkin will officiate at Flintstone while Clifton Van Roby and Bob Nelson will handle the contest at Mt. Savage.

Beall and Valley have two more games on their schedules. The leading contenders for the title clash Friday at Lonaconing. They battled to a 1-1 tie in their series opener.

St. Patrick's-St. Mary's Game Time Is Changed

The important Catholic Youth Football League game Sunday between St. Patrick's and St. Mary's at Mt. Calvary will be staged at 4 p.m., instead of 2 p.m., according to Coach Ronald Ingram of the Gaels.

St. Patrick's scored an 18-6 win over the Gaels earlier in the season but St. Mary's, after losing four in a row, exploded last Sunday and crushed St. Michael's, 45-20.

If St. Patrick's wins and SS. Peter & Paul defeats Frostburg Sunday the race will end in a tie.

REJOINS CARDINALS — Baseball's grand old man rejoined the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday after a separation of 20 years. Branch Rickey will serve as "a consultant on player personnel to the Cardinals' front office." Rickey said that he hoped for a pennant by 1965. He is shown at press conference announcing his new job. Rich Rollins Named AL's Sophomore Of The Year

Floyd Robinson Second; Pair Ties For Third

NEW YORK (AP) — Rich Rollins, the young third baseman whose unexpected power hitting helped the Minnesota Twins finish second in the American League race, was named the circuit's sophomore-of-the-year Monday in the annual Associated Press poll.

Rollins collected 49 votes in the balloting by members of the Baseball Writers' Association. Outfielder Floyd Robinson of the Chicago White Sox was next with 34, followed by outfielders Chuck Hinton of Washington and Carl Yastrzemski, Boston, 7 each; Leroy Thomas of Los Angeles, another outfielder, 6, and pitcher Claude Osteen, Washington, 3. A total of 106 writers participated in the voting.

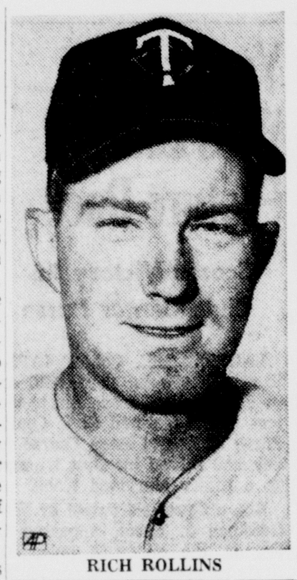

Rollins played in only 13 games for the Twins in 1961. However, he spent more than 45 days in the majors and thus does not qualify for this year's rookie award.

With a splendid showing in spring training, Rollins beat out four other candidates for a regular job. And, in 159 games the past season, he batted .298, walloped 16 homers and drove in 96 runs. He was among the batting leaders during most of the campaign, but slumped in the final month.

Robinson, an outstanding freshman in 1961 when he hit .310 with 11 homers and 59 RBI, surpassed that performance this year. He finished with a .312 average, 11 homers and 109 runs batted in. Robinson's batting mark was the third highest in the AL.

Hinton wound up fourth in the batting competition with .310. He also produced 17 homers, 75 RBI and stole 28 bases. In 1961 the fleet outfielder batted .260 in 106 games, hit 6 homers and collected 34 RBI.

Yastrzemski, a highly-touted rookie in '61, had a .296 average the past season. He batted only .266 the previous year. Thomas finished at .290 with 26 homers and 104 RBI. Osteen posted an 8-13 record with two shutouts and a 3.66 earned run average for the last-place Senators.

Evashevski Puts Rap On Big Ten Effigy Hangers

Iowa AD Terms Culprits Cowards

CHICAGO (AP)—Effigy hangers were blasted as cowards Monday by Forest Evashevski, Iowa Athletic director.

Evashevski, apparently referring to football coaches Jerry Burns of Iowa and Bump Elliott of Michigan, told Chicago's American quarterback club:

"I've had two good friends hanged in effigy. I resent some coward who hides behind obscurity and hangs someone in effigy.

"These idotic hangings should be treated the same as anonymous letters to the editor and thrown out.

"People who pay $5 to see a football game have a right to criticize. But if a coach is to be handed in effigy, let the person doing it be known. Otherwise, I see no reason to give it publicity—it is the work of cowards.

"My friends who were hanged in effigy have children. Such acts certainly are unfair to the family. I have a son (Frosty) who is a quarterback at Michigan. I am glad he is playing for such a coach as Bump Elliott, who will never sacrifice a conviction to win a ball game.

"Another thing I resent," Evashevski continued, "are comments of wags that the Big Ten is becoming a second rate conference because of high academic requirements. It did not become great because of football players, but rather because it is made up of 10 great institutions. I have no fear the conference ever will lose its dominance. This time could only come if scholastic standards were lowered.

"I see nothing worse than a university lowering its academic standards to build an athletic program."

Branch Rickey Rejoins Card Organization

Returns To Club After 20 Years

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Branch Rickey rejoined the St. Louis Cardinals Monday after a separation of 20 years and announced it would take a miracle for the Cards to win the pennant next year.

The bushy-browed, 80-year-old Rickey sat in his Busch Stadium office and said his new job was the production and development of players. Near him sat the big names in the Card organization—President August A. Busch Jr., General Manager Bing Devine, and Executive Vice President Dick Meyer.

"This club can't be traded into a pennant," Rickey said. "There aren't that many players around for trade. The players have got to be developed."

When told that a new baseball stadium is scheduled for completion in St. Louis in 1964, Rickey said, "It would be a great thing if the team could be a contender by then."

"I'm anxious for the team to win a pennant," he added, and 1965 seems to be a "rational objective for a pennant."

Rickey, who said he looks upon St. Louis as home, said he was happy to return to the Cardinals, for whom he worked as field manager, business manager and vice president from 1917 until 1942.

Two of Rickey's most noteworthy contributions to baseball were the development of the farm system and the bringing of Negroes into the major leagues.

With a heavy wooden cane resting near one hand, and a big cigar held in his other, Rickey spoke strongly against the payment of bonuses to young players.

And he predicted the eventual formation of a third major league.

The Mahatma, as he was known with the Brooklyn Dodgers, spent 26 years with the Cardinals and helped develop players who won nine pennants and six world championships between 1926 and 1946. Then he went to Brooklyn, where his teams won two pennants in eight years.

Rickey left the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1955 and recently was president of the Continental League, a proposed third major circuit. The league never made it—but it forced the two major leagues to expand from eight clubs to ten.

Angels Obtain Bob Turley

Yankees Get Rid Of Former Star

NEW YORK (AP)—Bob Turley, the majors' outstanding pitcher four years ago, was shipped to the Los Angeles Angels by the world champion New York Yankees Monday.

The deal was conditional. General Manager Roy Hamey of the Yankees said that the Angels will give the Yankees a mutually satisfactory player by opening day, 1963 if Turley is retained by Los Angeles. The veteran right-hander developed bone chips early in the 1961 campaign and has worked infrequently since then. He underwent elbow surgery last fall.

Turley, who pitched only one complete game in the past two seasons, had a 3-3 record in 1962. He also won three games in 1961.

He is currently player-manager of the San Juan club in the Puerto Rican Winter League. In his most recent effort, Turley was shelled from the mound in the third inning as Santurce defeated San Juan 6-1 Sunday night.

Turley was the ace of the Yankee pitching staff in 1958 when he won 21 games and was named winner of the Cy Young Award as the best pitcher in the big leagues. He also paced the club's World Series triumph that year winning two games and saving another in relief as New York edged the Milwaukee Braves, four games to three.

In 10 big league campaigns, Turley has won 98 games and lost 74. He is a native of East St. Louis, Ill. and lives in Lutherville, Md., just outside of Baltimore.

Opening lead: Nine of ♦

My good friend and neighbor, Jeff Glick of Miami Shores, a former president of the American Contract Bridge league, has been for many years the guiding force behind organized bridge activities in the Florida area.

During the recent Nationals in Minneapolis I had occasion to seat myself behind Mr. Glick for a quick kibitz. He was generous enough to provide me with the chef d'oeuvre featured today, in which he defeated a four-heart contract which was fulfilled by most of the other North-South pairs who encountered the deal.

North was confronted with a choice of responses, and he chose the conservative course by bidding one no trump. It was his intention to take an aggressive step if partner made another move on his own steam. When South rebid two hearts, North invited him to go on by raising to three hearts, and South proceeded to game.

Glick, seated West, opened his singleton nine of diamonds, and declarer permitted the lead to ride around to his king in order to preserve the dummy's limited entries. A small heart was led from the closed hand and, when West played low, North's queen won the trick. A club was returned, and East rose with the king in order to return the queen of diamonds.

Most players in the West seat ruffed in at this point and, by so doing, put an end to defensive prospects for, after winning the return, South was able to draw the remaining trump, cash the queen of clubs, and then enter the dummy with the diamond ace in order to discard his remaining diamond loser on the top club.

When East returned the queen of diamonds, Glick did not employ a trump. Instead he discarded a club, and declarer was helpless. He was forced to win the trick with the ace in dummy but the club suit was blocked, and there was no way to regain access to the North hand for a sluff on the ace of clubs. In the end South was obliged to concede two diamond tricks in addition to one heart and one club.

CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 179 "The service did not at once give perfect satisfaction. The cars were few and crowded, and crinolines occupied a disproportionate amount of space. Weary business men were aggrieved at being ejected from their seats by conductors 'to make room for any female.'"

Thus runs Margaret Leech's account, in "Reveille in Washington" (Harper), of the first streetcars in the Northern capital city, in 1862. Initially the service was through Pennsylvania Avenue from the Capitol to the Treasury Department. Any passenger not too crowded to look around could see his car had silk velvet upholstery, windows which combined plain and stained glass, and handsome damask curtains. For night time there was an ornate bronze lamp with a red globe.

A builder at Philadelphia was building cars more alluring in interior appointments than the wagon-like omnibuses that jolted through streets. This fact and the comparatively smooth rides via rails were attracting erstwhile "carriage trade" in profitable numbers. Earlier, less fancily equipped lines in New York and Boston, in the 1830s, had been financial failures. Washington's was one of about fifty lines built between 1855 and 1863. All used horse or mule for locomotion.

Passenger clientele of the Washington line became a political issue soon after June 1862, when the Congress outlawed slavery in the territories, including the District of Columbia. The action, which anticipated Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation some months, brought no immediate change in the condition of the colored people in the District. The manumitted slaves continued to work for their masters. The colored people were not permitted to ride inside Washington's new streetcars until Senator Sumner of Massachusetts made such an issue of this that the streetcar company had to stop enforcing the discrimination—a landmark action.

—CLARK KINNAIRD

Opening lead: Nine of ♦

My good friend and neighbor, Jeff Glick of Miami Shores, a former president of the American Contract Bridge league, has been for many years the guiding force behind organized bridge activities in the Florida area.

During the recent Nationals in Minneapolis I had occasion to seat myself behind Mr. Glick for a quick kibitz. He was generous enough to provide me with the chef d'oeuvre featured today, in which he defeated a four-heart contract which was fulfilled by most of the other North-South pairs who encountered the deal.

North was confronted with a choice of responses, and he chose the conservative course by bidding one no trump. It was his intention to take an aggressive step if partner made another move on his own steam. When South rebid two hearts, North invited him to go on by raising to three hearts, and South proceeded to game.

Glick, seated West, opened his singleton nine of diamonds, and declarer permitted the lead to ride around to his king in order to preserve the dummy's limited entries. A small heart was led from the closed hand and, when West played low, North's queen won the trick. A club was returned, and East rose with the king in order to return the queen of diamonds.

Most players in the West seat ruffed in at this point and, by so doing, put an end to defensive prospects for, after winning the return, South was able to draw the remaining trump, cash the queen of clubs, and then enter the dummy with the diamond ace in order to discard his remaining diamond loser on the top club.

When East returned the queen of diamonds, Glick did not employ a trump. Instead he discarded a club, and declarer was helpless. He was forced to win the trick with the ace in dummy but the club suit was blocked, and there was no way to regain access to the North hand for a sluff on the ace of clubs. In the end South was obliged to concede two diamond tricks in addition to one heart and one club.

CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 179 "The service did not at once give perfect satisfaction. The cars were few and crowded, and crinolines occupied a disproportionate amount of space. Weary business men were aggrieved at being ejected from their seats by conductors 'to make room for any female.'"

Thus runs Margaret Leech's account, in "Reveille in Washington" (Harper), of the first streetcars in the Northern capital city, in 1862. Initially the service was through Pennsylvania Avenue from the Capitol to the Treasury Department. Any passenger not too crowded to look around could see his car had silk velvet upholstery, windows which combined plain and stained glass, and handsome damask curtains. For night time there was an ornate bronze lamp with a red globe.

A builder at Philadelphia was building cars more alluring in interior appointments than the wagon-like omnibuses that jolted through streets. This fact and the comparatively smooth rides via rails were attracting erstwhile "carriage trade" in profitable numbers. Earlier, less fancily equipped lines in New York and Boston, in the 1830s, had been financial failures. Washington's was one of about fifty lines built between 1855 and 1863. All used horse or mule for locomotion.

Passenger clientele of the Washington line became a political issue soon after June 1862, when the Congress outlawed slavery in the territories, including the District of Columbia. The action, which anticipated Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation some months, brought no immediate change in the condition of the colored people in the District. The manumitted slaves continued to work for their masters. The colored people were not permitted to ride inside Washington's new streetcars until Senator Sumner of Massachusetts made such an issue of this that the streetcar company had to stop enforcing the discrimination—a landmark action.

—CLARK KINNAIRD

Gubernatorial Foes Appear On Same Platform

Greenbelt Students Hear Tawes, Small

GREENBELT, Md. (AP) — Maryland's gubernatorial candidates mounted the same platform Monday for the first time since their campaigns began.

Gov. Tawes and his Republican challenger, Frank Small Jr., took turns addressing a mock political rally at Greenbelt Junior High School.

Tawes arrived 30 minutes after Small spoke. Small was preparing to leave the school when he heard Tawes enter to the strains of "Maryland, My Maryland" played by the school band. Small then joined other Republican candidates on the platform.

Shake Hands

Later, Tawes and Small, who have been saying unkind things about each other in recent weeks, shook hands amicably. Small stood and clapped as Tawes was being introduced and Tawes, doing his part, referred to "a distinguished businessman" among "our worthy opponents."

Missing from their speeches were the charges and counter charges which have marked the last two weeks of the campaign. Tawes talked about what he said was the state's fiscal soundness under his administration, his road construction programs and educational improvements.

Small got in the most direct plug when he told the students:

"I hope that in their wise judgment, your parents will vote for me."

The students sang songs and changed campaign verses with seeming nonpartisanship. Carrying placards they staged two parades around the auditorium and were joined by the entire Republican ticket in the first and by a couple of Democrats—not including Tawes—in the second.

If either side won an edge, it must have been the Democrats who scored by twice reminding the Greenbelt youngsters that their city began as a federal sponsored project under the New Deal in 1937.

Gets Applause

The Democratic candidate for re-election as comptroller, Louis L. Goldstein, got applause by saying President Kennedy had forced the Russians to back down on Cuba.

But the Republican candidate for 5th District Congressional seat, Joe M. Baker, declared that a complete blockade of Cuba is now needed to "bring Castro to his knees."

Earlier at coffee parties in College Park, Riverdale, Cheverly and Lanham, the Democratic candidates praised Kennedy's actions.

"He has brought us back from the brink of catastrophe within the last 24 hours," Atty. Gen. Thomas B. Finan said.

Valley Student New President Of State FHA

Region A Meeting Held In Flintstone

Andrea Bowden, Valley High School student, was selected state president of the Future Homemakers of America which held a Region A meeting at Flintstone School.

Catherine Shipway, Flintstone, was elected to serve as first vice president of the state. Both state officers have a long record of past offices and activities in FHA.

The two new officers will be installed at the state meeting in Baltimore on April 27. Regional officers who were installed at the close of the recent meeting include:

Rebecca Bolyard, Valley junior chapter, secretary; Linda Robertson, Valley senior chapter, historian; Elaine Maxey, Allegany chapter, chaplain.

Miss Ruth C. McColly, supervisor of home economics for public schools in Allegany County, adviser of Region A, said 191 chapter mothers, chapter advisers and members attended the meeting.

Plans for the meeting which had the theme, "Education and Better Family Living," were under the direction of Region A officers and advisers including.

Miss Bowden, fourth vice president; Elaine MacDonald, state historian, Bruce senior chapter; Miss Shipway, Region A. chaplain; Teresa Crites, Region A secretary, Allegany.

All chapters present participated in the program. Guest speaker was Mrs. Helga Hofacker who spoke on "Home Economics and Family Living in Germany."

Region A includes Allegany, Garrett and Washington county chapters.

3 Projects Discussed By GOP Unit

The three major projects of the Coordinating Council of Republican Clubs of Allegany County were discussed during a meeting of the unit last Wednesday.

Mrs. George H. Barncord, president, presided at the meeting held in the Young Men's Republican Club of Frostburg.

Business included a report on the luncheon given by the council last week, when state and congressional candidates were honored as the Republican Men of the Day.

Discussed at length were the three projects:

To help finance and assist in the Republican Man of the Day program.

To make the public aware that area residents will be voting for two Congressmen this year — one to represent the Sixth district and the other a Congressman at large.

To make a study of amendments which will appear on the November 6 ballot and to inform the public of the party's stand.

The council is urging a No vote on Question No. 6, redistricting, as called for in the state GOP platform.

On other questions, the council is asking clubs to study and discuss the issues, so members will understand and be able to discuss what is involved, but it will be up to the public to decide how it shall vote.

Tiedemann Will Fill High Office

Lieutenant Commander A. W. Tiedemann, commanding officer of U. S. Naval Reserve Surface Division 5-9, is the new national vice president for naval affairs of the Naval Reserve Association.

LCDR Tiedemann was elected at the close of a recent four-day meeting of the association at the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans, La. During the convention Naval Reserve matters of national importance were discussed and recommendations prepared for consideration by the Navy Department.

LCDR Tiedemann, who is employed at Allegany Ballistics Laboratory as an analytical chemist, is the first local resident ever to hold a high office in the Naval Reserve Association.

The NRA is the major representative organization for all Naval Reserve officers in shaping national policies and standards.

As national vice president for naval affairs, LCDR Tiedemann is responsible for organizing a committee to consider all Naval Reserve matters brought to its attention, to make recommendations to the association and to promote the continuation and growth of the Naval Reserve on a national scale. The committee will investigate and support subjects of interest to the Naval Reserve brought before the Navy Department, Defense Department or Congress.

He has been commanding officer of the local unit since July 1.

Governor Tawes Woos Prince George's Demos

This is one of a series of Associated Press articles surveying the Maryland general election scene.

By HERB THOMPSON

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Southern Marylanders have been treated to an unusual sight in the 1962 election campaign: A Democratic governor wooing the Democratic stronghold of Prince Georges County.

And Gov. J. Millard Tawes has been courting it ardently.

He recently made three all-day tours of the county and attended three major evening rallies there within a 10-day period, meeting personally several thousand voters and campaign workers.

He cut ribbons opening a new highway and announced further road construction planned in the populous District of Columbia area within the next year. He stressed other accomplishments of his administration and asked for a new term Nov. 6.

Veteran Democrats couldn't recall the county ever receiving so much attention from a chief executive of their party. The only time the county went Republican for governor in recent years was in a general rebellion against the state sales tax in 1950.

But there were several reasons for Tawes' concern:

1. Prince Georges, which has 129,613 registered voters and a 2½ to 1 Democratic edge, rejected the governor in the May 15 primary in favor of a relative unknown, David Hume, and there was no apparent letup in anti-Tawes feeling after the primary.

2. The Lansdale G. Sasscer organization which has been delivering majority votes to the Democratic column for 30 years was defeated in a bitter primary which left scars still unhealed.

3. Prince Georges is the home county of Tawes' Republican opponent, Frank Small Jr., a Clinton businessman and banker.

The governor and his advisers were afraid only three weeks ago that the old standby, which Tawes carried by 25,000 votes four years ago, might be lost by substantial margin.

But Democratic hopes are looking up now. Tawes was warmly received on his recent visits, planned by an energetic new organization of "insurgent" Democrats who won in May. And Sasscer-organization Democrats joined in these efforts for the statewide ticket.

Local campaign leaders figure he will now carry the county by 3,000 to 5,000 votes, maybe more if interest in the campaign picks up. Most newsmen who cover the county share this view.

Republican leaders still maintain that Small will win his home county by a wide margin. He will do so, they say, with the help of dissident Democrats and a general "desire for a change" in government at both the state and the county levels.

Tawes has virtually ignored the other Southern Maryland counties in his concentrated campaign on the populous suburban regions around Washington and Baltimore.

In the four slot-machine counties, where he incurred disfavor among politicians with his promise to abolish slots, he has made only one formal campaign appearance — at a women's Democratic club meeting in tiny Calvert several weeks ago.

But Prince Georges, where the slot machine issue tends to be a plus rather than a minus, has more votes than the other five counties combined in Southern Maryland's 5th Congressional District. It is the state's third largest county after Baltimore and Montgomery.

In the rest of Southern Maryland, it is generally agreed among political observers that Tawes should carry Anne Arundel and St. Marys, although by reduced margins from former years because of his stand on slot machines.

He is expected to lose Charles County to Small, and the race is

Billboards Stressed By GOP Candidate

Hughes Carries Drive To Oldtown

George R. Hughes Jr., Republican candidate for State Senator, last night carried his campaign into the Oldtown area and urged support for a GOP team to represent Allegany County in the General Assembly.

He said he and the Republican candidates for the House of Delegates met long ago and firmly resolved to run as a team.

Mr. Hughes was one of the principal speakers at a Republican rally held in the Oldtown Fire Hall last night and attended by some 70 residents of the area.

The GOP candidate said that for the past week or so he has been trying to tell, along with his stand on important issues of the campaign "how far beyond the bounds of fair play certain of our opponents have gone in their desperate effort to succeed."

Billboards Discussed

Cited were the disappearance of "our signs and posters along our roads in Allegany County on the order of the State Roads Commission" while from last reports "similar signs are still up in Garrett County and Washington County."

He related details of how a billboard on North Mechanic Street, one of six reserved to advocate the candidacy of the entire GOP legislative team, has been replaced, saying "Apparently there was a request that the owner was bound to honor and the advertising company had to remove our billboard posting," adding:

"While my opponent speaks of being a member of the 'party of the people' and being sincerely interested in the workingman and organized labor, his actions just don't measure up."

He said a large sign painted on one of the buildings near the post office did not have a union label on it and did not state by whose authority it was printed.

Pledges Progress

Russell H. Carder said that since his last speech, he has been taunted by the opposition concerning his stand as a County Commissioner candidate, but that he has refused to be drawn into an "exercise of charges and counter charges."

He pledged that he would work diligently and faithfully with his fellow candidates as a ticket for "progress and advancement" of Allegany County.

He said he will work with Louis V. Shinnamon and Robert Little Ebert, the other members of the GOP team for "all our citizens, regardless of party."

Speaking for Republican candidates to the House of Delegates, Charles M. See said he and Fred Anderson, J. Glenn Beall Jr., Noel Speir Cook, Lester B. Reed and David J. Williams are running as a six-man team to represent all the people of the county.

Victor Hebb was in charge of the rally and Mr. Beall served as master of ceremonies.

James Blair spoke for GOP Orphans Court candidates and James W. Bishop, county treasurer, as a candidate for reelection.

Down The Line GOP Vote Is Urged By Lowe

Discusses Issues In State Campaign

Kenneth K. Lowe, vice chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee, last night told Oldtown area residents the time has come "when we must elect every one of our Republican candidates on our ticket."

"You can do this by pressing and leaving down all 25 leavers on Line B. This will assure Republicans in office nationally, state-wide and locally," he said.

"Best of all," Mr. Lowe told the some 70 residents who attended a rally in the Oldtown Fire Hall last night, "this action will throw the money changers out of the temple."

He said he would like to clarify the Campaign Committee's stand "about the apparent political bias of the Cumberland Evening and Sunday Times newspapers and what we are going to do about it."

Has Right To Fight

There is nothing we can do, he said, about the political preference of the local press adding "Ownership of the papers has the right to political preference and, certainly, has the right to fight—even as we Republicans. We must recognize that in the Evening Times papers, we have a formidable foe, adding:

"In all fairness, we must say that the Cumberland News, the morning paper, has presented the Republican principles completely and faithfully."

"Why are taxes higher today then when you first went into office?" he asked of Democratic Candidates for County Commissioners."

He said that since political advertisements claim a tax reduction, you should explain. Some people feel your claim is phony and liken it to a case where a grocer might put a 30 cent price tag on a 20 cent loaf of bread, then advertise it for sale for 25 cents."

(When the former county commissioners set their last tax rate in 1958 it was $2.05 on each $100 of assessable property. The following year the new county commissioners raised the rate to $2.22. However each year since then the rate has been reduced. It was $2.20 in 1960, $2.10 in 1961 and then this year was lowered to $1.85, which is 20 cents less than it was four years ago when they took office.)

Cites SB 19 Vote

Of the Democratic candidate for State Senator he asked "Are you for or against the working man as evidence by your vote on Senate Bill 19?" saying a plain answer was all that is desired."

He said state-wide and congressional Democratic candidates have tried desperately to avoid taking a stand on issues.

He said the GOP does not question they have been on the job for the past four years but "what sort of job you have done on behalf of the people of Maryland."

The issues, he said, are conflict of interest, the increase in the sales tax spread which works a hardship on working and poor people and that the present administration is not a friend of the working man as evidence by passage of Senate Bill 19.

Former Local Youth Held On Entry Count

A former local youth was remanded to Allegany County Jail yesterday in default of $500 bond after a preliminary hearing on a breaking and entering charge.

Donald William Easton, 18, who gave his address as Hyattsville, appeared before Magistrate Paul E. Barnett on a charge of breaking and entering the Cumberland Loan Company last Friday night, and taking three rifles and a 16 gauge shotgun valued at $200.

He also is charged with breaking and entering the Cline Sports Center, 1211 Ella Street, on Saturday night and taking three revolvers valued at $114.40; a soldering gun valued at $14.95 and at least 27 boxes of ammunition.

Two other teen-agers who were arrested Sunday afternoon along with Easton in connection with the burglary of the Cline Sports Center, will be given a hearing Friday in Juvenile Court.

Easton requested an immediate trial.

Investigation of the case is being conducted by Detective Thomas J. See and Lt. Elmer Shank, of the City Police, and Sgt. William F. Baker, acting county investigator.

Appeals Board Plans Hearing November 15

The Board of Appeals of Allegany County has scheduled a public hearing for November 15, at 2 p.m. in the County Commissioners meeting room at the Court House.

The hearing is being held in connection with the appeal filed by Harry Reeves Sr., who is seeking a special permit to expand the present site used for the storage and dismantling of used cars.

The site is located on the north side of Maryland Route 135 about one and a half miles east of Westernport.

The board will hear the proponents of, or objections to, or protests against the granting of the permit, said Everett G. Partridge, chairman of the board.

Sanitarians To Attend Meet

Three sanitarians from the Allegany County Health Department and one from Garrett County will attend a workshop for sanitarians tomorrow and Thursday at the State Roads Commission Building in Baltimore.

The workshop has been called to discuss the technical aspects of food service equipment by the State Department of Health in conjunction with the Public Health Service and the National Sanitarian Foundation Standards Institute.

In view of the many new and complete pieces of equipment being put into use, the workshop is an important phase of inservice training for health personnel engaged in restaurant and food processing plant inspections and supervisions, according to J. Henry Schilpp, Public Health engineer with the Bureau of Environment Hygiene.

Attending from Allegany county are Gaylord Brooks, senior sanitarian, Stanley Ritchie and Conrad Zimmerman. Charles Miller will attend from Garrett County.

Tasker's Condition Remains "Critical"

Marshall Tasker, 24, of Star Route, Kitzmiller, who was injured in an automobile accident on Sunday, October 21 on Maryland Route 135 near Bloomington, remained in "critical" condition last night at Memorial Hospital.

His wife, Mary Ellen Tasker, 23, injured in the accident, is reported in satisfactory condition at Potomac Valley Hospital in Keyser. Mary Jane Tasker, 24, of Vindex, who was admitted to the same hospital was discharged a few days ago.

Killed in the accident was Clarence E. Paugh, 27, of Akron, Ohio, driver of the car.

The newspaper also supported Democrats Louis L. Goldstein for comptroller and Thomas B. Finan for attorney general.

Gubernatorial Foes Appear On Same Platform

Greenbelt Students Hear Tawes, Small

GREENBELT, Md. (AP) — Maryland's gubernatorial candidates mounted the same platform Monday for the first time since their campaigns began.

Gov. Tawes and his Republican challenger, Frank Small Jr., took turns addressing a mock political rally at Greenbelt Junior High School.

Tawes arrived 30 minutes after Small spoke. Small was preparing to leave the school when he heard Tawes enter to the strains of "Maryland, My Maryland" played by the school band. Small then joined other Republican candidates on the platform.

Shake Hands

Later, Tawes and Small, who have been saying unkind things about each other in recent weeks, shook hands amicably. Small stood and clapped as Tawes was being introduced and Tawes, doing his part, referred to "a distinguished businessman" among "our worthy opponents."

Missing from their speeches were the charges and counter charges which have marked the last two weeks of the campaign. Tawes talked about what he said was the state's fiscal soundness under his administration, his road construction programs and educational improvements.

Small got in the most direct plug when he told the students:

"I hope that in their wise judgment, your parents will vote for me."

The students sang songs and changed campaign verses with seeming nonpartisanship. Carrying placards they staged two parades around the auditorium and were joined by the entire Republican ticket in the first and by a couple of Democrats—not including Tawes—in the second.

If either side won an edge, it must have been the Democrats who scored by twice reminding the Greenbelt youngsters that their city began as a federal sponsored project under the New Deal in 1937.

Gets Applause

The Democratic candidate for re-election as comptroller, Louis L. Goldstein, got applause by saying President Kennedy had forced the Russians to back down on Cuba.

But the Republican candidate for 5th District Congressional seat, Joe M. Baker, declared that a complete blockade of Cuba is now needed to "bring Castro to his knees."

Earlier at coffee parties in College Park, Riverdale, Cheverly and Lanham, the Democratic candidates praised Kennedy's actions.

"He has brought us back from the brink of catastrophe within the last 24 hours," Atty. Gen. Thomas B. Finan said.

3 Projects Discussed By GOP Unit

The three major projects of the Coordinating Council of Republican Clubs of Allegany County were discussed during a meeting of the unit last Wednesday.

Mrs. George H. Barncord, president, presided at the meeting held in the Young Men's Republican Club of Frostburg.

Business included a report on the luncheon given by the council last week, when state and congressional candidates were honored as the Republican Men of the Day.

Discussed at length were the three projects:

To help finance and assist in the Republican Man of the Day program.

To make the public aware that area residents will be voting for two Congressmen this year — one to represent the Sixth district and the other a Congressman at large.

To make a study of amendments which will appear on the November 6 ballot and to inform the public of the party's stand.

The council is urging a No vote on Question No. 6, redistricting, as called for in the state GOP platform.

On other questions, the council is asking clubs to study and discuss the issues, so members will understand and be able to discuss what is involved, but it will be up to the public to decide how it shall vote.

Governor Tawes Woos Prince George's Demos

This is one of a series of Associated Press articles surveying the Maryland general election scene.

By HERB THOMPSON

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Southern Marylanders have been treated to an unusual sight in the 1962 election campaign: A Democratic governor wooing the Democratic stronghold of Prince Georges County.

And Gov. J. Millard Tawes has been courting it ardently.

He recently made three all-day tours of the county and attended three major evening rallies there within a 10-day period, meeting personally several thousand voters and campaign workers.

He cut ribbons opening a new highway and announced further road construction planned in the populous District of Columbia area within the next year. He stressed other accomplishments of his administration and asked for a new term Nov. 6.

Veteran Democrats couldn't recall the county ever receiving so much attention from a chief executive of their party. The only time the county went Republican for governor in recent years was in a general rebellion against the state sales tax in 1950.

But there were several reasons for Tawes' concern:

1. Prince Georges, which has 129,613 registered voters and a 2½ to 1 Democratic edge, rejected the governor in the May 15 primary in favor of a relative unknown, David Hume, and there was no apparent letup in anti-Tawes feeling after the primary.

2. The Lansdale G. Sasscer organization which has been delivering majority votes to the Democratic column for 30 years was defeated in a bitter primary which left scars still unhealed.

3. Prince Georges is the home county of Tawes' Republican opponent, Frank Small Jr., a Clinton businessman and banker.

The governor and his advisers were afraid only three weeks ago that the old standby, which Tawes carried by 25,000 votes four years ago, might be lost by substantial margin.

But Democratic hopes are looking up now. Tawes was warmly received on his recent visits, planned by an energetic new organization of "insurgent" Democrats who won in May. And Sasscer-organization Democrats joined in these efforts for the statewide ticket.

Local campaign leaders figure he will now carry the county by 3,000 to 5,000 votes, maybe more if interest in the campaign picks up. Most newsmen who cover the county share this view.

Republican leaders still maintain that Small will win his home county by a wide margin. He will do so, they say, with the help of dissident Democrats and a general "desire for a change" in government at both the state and the county levels.

Tawes has virtually ignored the other Southern Maryland counties in his concentrated campaign on the populous suburban regions around Washington and Baltimore.

In the four slot-machine counties, where he incurred disfavor among politicians with his promise to abolish slots, he has made only one formal campaign appearance — at a women's Democratic club meeting in tiny Calvert several weeks ago.

But Prince Georges, where the slot machine issue tends to be a plus rather than a minus, has more votes than the other five counties combined in Southern Maryland's 5th Congressional District. It is the state's third largest county after Baltimore and Montgomery.

In the rest of Southern Maryland, it is generally agreed among political observers that Tawes should carry Anne Arundel and St. Marys, although by reduced margins from former years because of his stand on slot machines.

He is expected to lose Charles County to Small, and the race is

Billboards Stressed By GOP Candidate

Hughes Carries Drive To Oldtown

George R. Hughes Jr., Republican candidate for State Senator, last night carried his campaign into the Oldtown area and urged support for a GOP team to represent Allegany County in the General Assembly.

He said he and the Republican candidates for the House of Delegates met long ago and firmly resolved to run as a team.

Mr. Hughes was one of the principal speakers at a Republican rally held in the Oldtown Fire Hall last night and attended by some 70 residents of the area.

The GOP candidate said that for the past week or so he has been trying to tell, along with his stand on important issues of the campaign "how far beyond the bounds of fair play certain of our opponents have gone in their desperate effort to succeed."

Billboards Discussed

Cited were the disappearance of "our signs and posters along our roads in Allegany County on the order of the State Roads Commission" while from last reports "similar signs are still up in Garrett County and Washington County."

He related details of how a billboard on North Mechanic Street, one of six reserved to advocate the candidacy of the entire GOP legislative team, has been replaced, saying "Apparently there was a request that the owner was bound to honor and the advertising company had to remove our billboard posting," adding:

"While my opponent speaks of being a member of the 'party of the people' and being sincerely interested in the workingman and organized labor, his actions just don't measure up."

He said a large sign painted on one of the buildings near the post office did not have a union label on it and did not state by whose authority it was printed.

Pledges Progress

Russell H. Carder said that since his last speech, he has been taunted by the opposition concerning his stand as a County Commissioner candidate, but that he has refused to be drawn into an "exercise of charges and counter charges."

He pledged that he would work diligently and faithfully with his fellow candidates as a ticket for "progress and advancement" of Allegany County.

He said he will work with Louis V. Shinnamon and Robert Little Ebert, the other members of the GOP team for "all our citizens, regardless of party."

Speaking for Republican candidates to the House of Delegates, Charles M. See said he and Fred Anderson, J. Glenn Beall Jr., Noel Speir Cook, Lester B. Reed and David J. Williams are running as a six-man team to represent all the people of the county.

Victor Hebb was in charge of the rally and Mr. Beall served as master of ceremonies.

James Blair spoke for GOP Orphans Court candidates and James W. Bishop, county treasurer, as a candidate for reelection.

Discusses Issues In State Campaign

Kenneth K. Lowe, vice chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee, last night told Oldtown area residents the time has come "when we must elect every one of our Republican candidates on our ticket."

"You can do this by pressing and leaving down all 25 leavers on Line B. This will assure Republicans in office nationally, state-wide and locally," he said.

"Best of all," Mr. Lowe told the some 70 residents who attended a rally in the Oldtown Fire Hall last night, "this action will throw the money changers out of the temple."

He said he would like to clarify the Campaign Committee's stand "about the apparent political bias of the Cumberland Evening and Sunday Times newspapers and what we are going to do about it."

Has Right To Fight

There is nothing we can do, he said, about the political preference of the local press adding "Ownership of the papers has the right to political preference and, certainly, has the right to fight—even as we Republicans. We must recognize that in the Evening Times papers, we have a formidable foe, adding:

"In all fairness, we must say that the Cumberland News, the morning paper, has presented the Republican principles completely and faithfully."

"Why are taxes higher today then when you first went into office?" he asked of Democratic Candidates for County Commissioners."

He said that since political advertisements claim a tax reduction, you should explain. Some people feel your claim is phony and liken it to a case where a grocer might put a 30 cent price tag on a 20 cent loaf of bread, then advertise it for sale for 25 cents."

(When the former county commissioners set their last tax rate in 1958 it was $2.05 on each $100 of assessable property. The following year the new county commissioners raised the rate to $2.22. However each year since then the rate has been reduced. It was $2.20 in 1960, $2.10 in 1961 and then this year was lowered to $1.85, which is 20 cents less than it was four years ago when they took office.)

Cites SB 19 Vote

Of the Democratic candidate for State Senator he asked "Are you for or against the working man as evidence by your vote on Senate Bill 19?" saying a plain answer was all that is desired."

He said state-wide and congressional Democratic candidates have tried desperately to avoid taking a stand on issues.

He said the GOP does not question they have been on the job for the past four years but "what sort of job you have done on behalf of the people of Maryland."

The issues, he said, are conflict of interest, the increase in the sales tax spread which works a hardship on working and poor people and that the present administration is not a friend of the working man as evidence by passage of Senate Bill 19.
